THE SUPPORT of the community is helping Julie and Alina Sterner stay positive. Alina was diagnosed with leukemia last month. Photo by Rachel Weaver

Community unites to help family

By Rachel Weaver

Staff writer

When Alina Sterner went with a friend to pick out a wig a few weeks ago, her mom laid one ground rule: no pink.

Alina, then, had a rule of her own: her mother is not allowed to shave her head just to make her feel better.

Last month, the Edgeworth Elementary fourth grader was diagnosed with leukemia.

"She's been so positive," says Julie, Alina's mother.

In late December, Alina was playing soccer when she felt short of breath. Worried, Julie called the pediatrician who told her to monitor Alina's symptoms.

A few days later, mother and daughter shopped for a New Year's party, and Julie noticed that Alina looked pale. Because the doctor's office was closed for the holiday, Julie had to wait to call.

But when Alina returned to her fourth grade class at Edgeworth Elementary after break and had to leave early after losing her breath in gym class, Julie couldn't wait anymore.

She took Alina to the doctor, who wanted to put the young girl on medication for an ear infection and asthma, but gut instinct made Julie push for blood work.

That night, Alina went to her brother's hockey game. When she got home that evening, the family got the call: they should pack a bag and be at Children's Hospital in the morning.

Alina was diagnosed with acute lymphocytic leukemia (ALL), the most common type of leukemia for people under the age of 19.

ALL results from an acquired genetic injury to the DNA of a single cell in the bone marrow. It is characterized by uncontrolled growth and accumulation of cells and the blockade of the production of normal marrow cells. It leads to a deficiency of red cells, platelets and normal white cells in the blood.

Township pulls out of ASO group

By Jon Paul Creese

Staff writer

During a special legislative session last week, Aleppo commissioners voted to pull out of all negotiations regarding joint ventures with Sewickley and Osborne.

The ASO (Aleppo, Sewickley, Osborne) committee was designed to research various ways the municipalities could work together to save money and create more efficient means of providing municipal services to residents.

One proposed joint effort, the creation of a regional police force, fell through in January.

Aleppo commissioners felt Sewickley council members did not bargain in good faith and are concerned they will continue in that vein regarding future joint proposals.

"Sewickley's objective is to sell services so they can keep control," said Oliver Poppenberg Sr., president of Aleppo's Board of Commissioners.

"We tried to cooperate, but when push came to shove, they didn't have a regional interest," Poppenberg said. "They had their own priorities."

Poppenberg said while he believes the creation of joint ventures are a possibility in the future, Aleppo has no interest until Sewickley and Osborne negotiate along more cooperative terms.

"Until Sewickley and Osborne decide they want to work together, we're not interested," he said. "Osborne is only interested in low cost, not cooperation between the groups."

Board hears QV-specific Act 72 points

By Dona S. Dreeland
Editor

QUAKER VALLEY

What are the odds that participating in Act 72 will be a safe bet for Quaker Valley School District?

That question would be easier to answer if the proposition's base numbers were hard and fast -- but they are not.

By May 30, each of the state's 501 school districts must decide whether to play or to fold on Act 72, which reduces property taxes but raises earned or personal income tax rates.

Once districts opt out, they cannot opt in -- unless the state changes some of the specifics of the act; once in, they can opt out, but only by vote of their residents after four years.

The act itself is revenue neutral. It provides a tax reduction and a tax shift, beginning in the 2007-2008 school year, but does not provide additional income to fund academics.

Quaker Valley hired David Sallack, managing director of Public Financial Management Inc. of Harrisburg, to help the school board's ad hoc committee sort through the possible impact of Act 72.

Sallack made his second presentation to the committee last week.

To date, 75 percent of district homeowners have applied for the homeowners exemption through Allegheny County.

(The deadline to make application for the homestead exemption is March 1. The county Web site provides information and the application form.)

As Act 72 reads: Gaming funds will be distributed to participating districts only when gaming revenues reach $750 million. Then through a pre-set formula, districts will receive their allocation, which will increase or decrease as the gaming revenue does.

Quaker Valley's share, a low amount of funding because the district is considered relatively wealthy with a low tax effort, will be $562,951.

An earned income tax rate at 1 percent, would afford the district an estimated $369,853.

Through simple addition then, the district would have approximately $932,804 to divide among participating homeowners -- or an $284 reduction in property taxes per household.

(If 100 percent of residents apply and qualify, that number would decrease.)

The tax reduction rate would fluctuate as gaming revenues do, and high wage earners move in and out of town.

Property owners would benefit by the tax reduction. Those with high earned or personal incomes, those who rent within the district, or business owners would not.

Sallack worked through models, charts and tables, showing median household income and property values to illustrate the impact of Act 72 on the school budget if it is chosen.

Also as part of Act 72, participating districts will need voters' approval via referendum before raising taxes for programming needs, unless exceptions apply.

Voters' also would decide if the earned or personal income tax percentage could be raised to effect more property tax reduction.

Districts also would incur new administrative costs and would need to project multi-year budget strategies on a new timeline.

"There's no benefit to act early," said David Ciesinski, committee member, asking Sallack to return March 16 for another presentation.

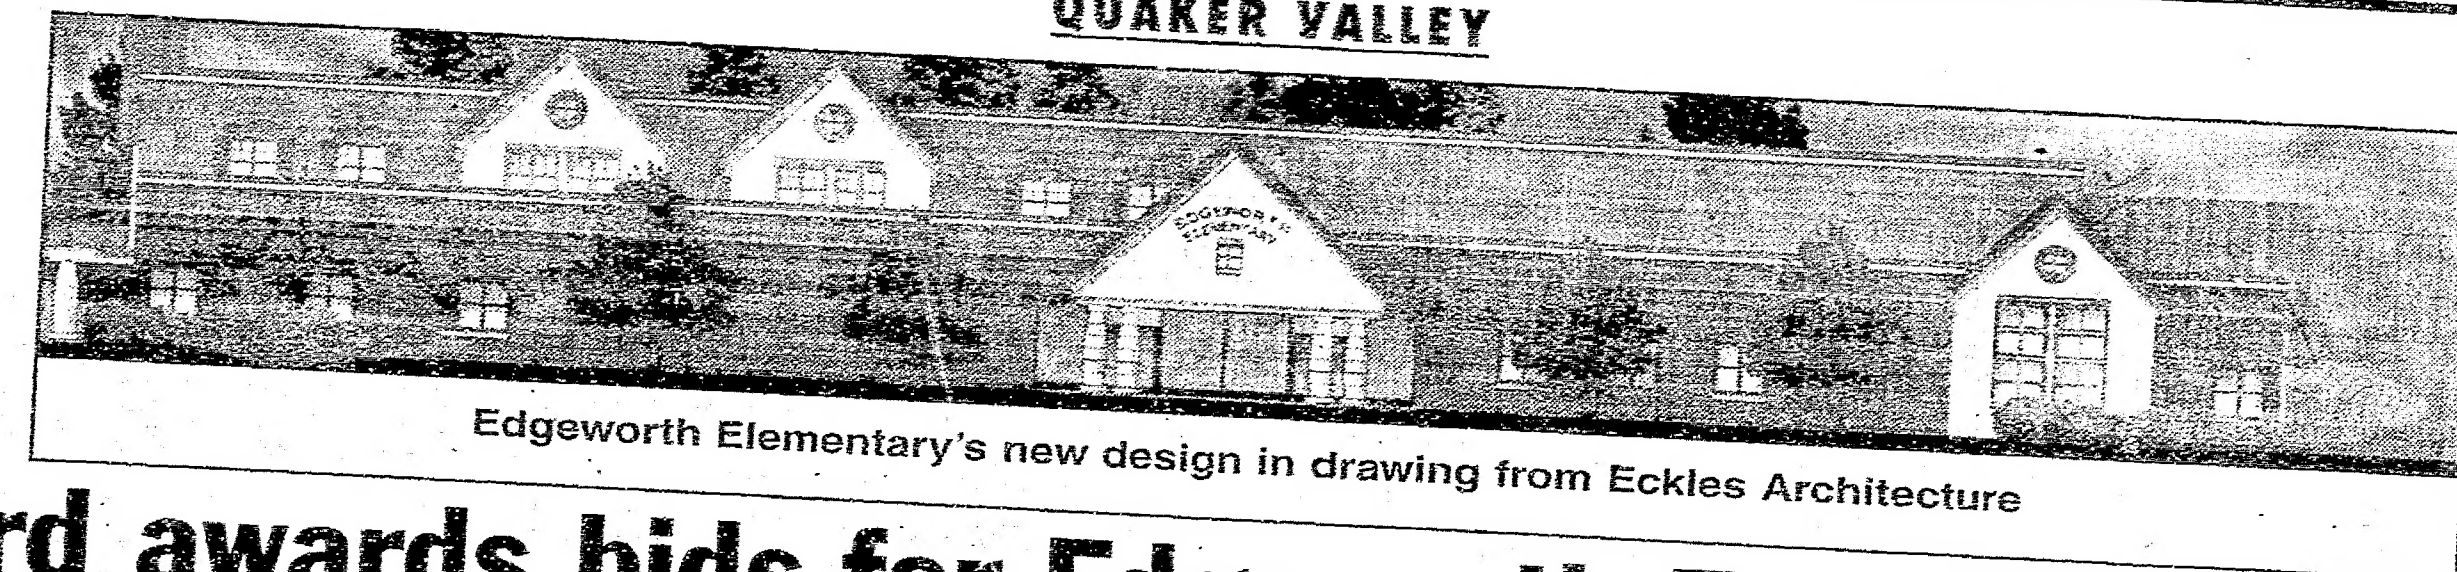

Sallack will complete an analysis using personal income tax figures and charts to show how the numbers would break down if every party accepted or rejected the plan based on self interest.

In the meantime, district officials will ask the county for updated numbers on homeowners qualified for the exemption.

Administrators will gather information from other districts through the Allegheny Intermediate Unit.

Dr. R. Gerard Longo, superintendent, will talk to his counterparts at Fox Chapel and Wyomissing, QV's "twin" district in southeast Pennsylvania.

Board awards bids for Edgeworth Elementary project

By Dona S. Dreeland
Editor

Quaker Valley School Board awarded bids totaling $14,182,400 for the project at Edgeworth Elementary School last week.

The contractors are:

- R.A. Glancy and Sons Inc. of Gibsonia, general construction, $9,542,000.
- Moore-Boehm Enterprises Inc., of Lawrence, Pa., mechanical construction, $1,964,700.

- Vrabel Plumbing Company LLC, of Gibsonia, plumbing construction, $1,027,200.
- A-1 Electric Inc., of Venetia, Pa., electrical construction, $1,648,500.

"Years of planning and lots of listening -- parents, administration, neighbors, the borough -- have gone into this project," said Joan Murdoch, board president.

Enrollment needs, changes in programming, class size and the 30+ year old buildings were driving forces of the renovation/rebuilding projects.

Bids were competitive, she said, but more than the board had hoped.

In May, members approved a $29,715,000 bond issue with 84.6 percent or $25,130,090 going toward the elementary school projects. The cost per building then was estimated at $10.9 million.

A higher demand for building products, the price of oil and other changes in the project budget increased the cost per building.

Osborne Elementary's new design

"We're going forward, but we're looking at the master plan again for ways to cut costs," said Murdoch. "We will minimize the tax impact as much as we can."

Work on Edgeworth School is set to begin this spring and be completed in August 2006. Improvements include nine new classrooms, a new cafeteria, additional storage space, modernization of the building's floor plan, utilities and mechanical systems and a new exterior façade.

The entire educational operation at Edgeworth will be relocated to Anthony Wayne Elementary School building in Ambridge for the 2005-06 school year.

Identical renovations are planned for Osborne Elementary for the 2006-2007 school year.

The Anthony Wayne building will be used during this time.

Penne earns dollars for neighbors in need

By Dona S. Dreeland

Comfort foods.

In the heart of winter we all enjoy them. In fact, we need them, especially when the wind blows so hard our eyes tear and our hands go almost numb.

On Sunday, the community is invited to partake of a hearty dinner — pasta, sauce, meatballs and salad — at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Washington Street, Sewickley.

And in doing so, participants will be able to give some comfort to the Sterner family of Bell Acres.

Alina, the daughter of Bob and Julie, was diagnosed with leukemia in early January.

It was a cold word to attach to a bright new year. But shortly after the diagnosis became known in the Quaker Valley School District and throughout the community, volunteers rallied to assist the Sterners as they learned to deal with this heart-wrenching medical crisis.

Sunday's dinner was planned by Linda Kelley and other friends to help to ease the financial concerns of the family.

All proceeds will go directly to them — for the big and little things.

"We just want to decrease the financial worries at this moment," said Linda. "We want them to focus on taking care of her."

All the ordinary days of other years have disappeared as the family shifts into a new lifestyle. All the while, they will be supported.

What they have come to know is that in this community when the need is greatest, neighbors — and even strangers — contribute what they can.

"I just made a few phone calls and things started to happen," Linda said — people knew people who knew people who could help.

That is the wonder and the joy of our lives here. To date, all of the foodstuffs for the dinner have been donated, and there are more volunteers than the planners know what to do with.

"This has come together easier than anything I've ever done," said Linda.

Giving isn't difficult when the cause is right: This Sunday, a little girl and her family need our help.

Commissioners end alliance with neighbors least tentatively scrapped are sewage, planning and zoning regionalization packages.

Poppenberg said Aleppo is keeping all options open, including working with other neighboring municipalities like Ohio Township, Sewickley Heights and Sewickley Hills.

"We have more in common with those townships anyway," Poppenberg said and suggested Aleppo might get the short end of the stick when it came down to future development with Sewickley and Osborne, partly due to a lack of land and retail space in those municipalities.

"Look at the mess Sewickley is in," Poppenberg said of data produced by a 741 Report that purportedly outlines failing business prospects. "Sewickley has to worry about their retail, which is dying on the vine."

"Look how they've managed their planning and zoning ... and they want to pull us into that?" he offered incredulously, citing recent examples of perceived zoning mishaps related to construction on Ferry and Beaver Streets and other areas throughout the borough.

Poppenberg and other Aleppo commissioners are bitter over Sewickley's handling of negotiations for regional police authority, which marked the beginning of the end of ASO.

"After 10 months of discussions, there was no action on their part. They left us with no police force," Poppenberg said, charging that Sewickley "strung [Aleppo] along" by accepting terms proposed for deadlines as well as personnel and other sensitive matters orally then pulling out at the last minute.

Sewickley listed conditions for a regional agreement in a letter dated Dec. 21, 2004, which Poppenberg received prior to Aleppo disbanding its police force, but with insufficient time to meet Sewickley's requirements.

Sewickley's concerns included personnel and physical conditioning, financial responsibility of current workmen's compensation claims of former Aleppo officers, and an assurance that no outstanding grievances, appeals or lawsuits exist in Aleppo.

"As of this date, we have not received the requested written confirmation," the letter states and indicates Sewickley's resolve to "continue to work with Aleppo Township and all communities of the Quaker Valley area on joint projects and explore opportunities to enhance to effectiveness and efficiency of the delivery of municipal services to the residents of the area."

In other Aleppo news, Commissioner Gloria Vish, who resigned from the board during the January legislative session, agreed to stay on temporarily at Poppenberg's request.

RATS! Another Under-Appreciated Pet

by Burton Patrick

I know that most readers will say gross, yuck, ugh, and ewe! But to know them is to love them and from my perspective the pet rat is a under-appreciated companion.

There are about 400 species of rodents and the rat is one of the most successful of all the mammals. The rat has been denigrated and feared for centuries because they live with us and we don't want them eating food supplies. This is certainly a concern, but their reputation for spreading the Black Plague through Europe and killing a third of the population during the Middle Ages in Europe is only partially true. As it turns out the rat just carried the human fleas from one person to another so the rat was more of a vector for the disease than the cause. It was poor sanitary habits and the human flea carried the bacterial disease that caused the plague.

Many kids like rats as pets. But mothers are not big fans for a lot of reasons. But I think the rat is one of the best pets for kids six and older. Actually, I think kids like reptiles and rodents as pets, because it makes their mother squirm. But that is another story.

So this is just the beginning of the life of the rat. I will write more about them occasionally. All yucks and ughs aside, they can make wonderful pets that rarely bite, which makes them much better pets than most any other small animal.

The pet rat we know today came from the Norway Rat which have been bred for being good pets and laboratory animals for the past 150 years. Their importance as a laboratory animal stems from similarities with human physiology and their reproductive ability. They are especially important in areas of cancer research and behavior studies, and frequently used in neurophysiological experiments.

In the wild, Rats have become permanent fixtures in areas of human habitation. They are on every continent where humans have become established. They are immensely successful survivors in and around human habitation. They are great diggers and they have complex social interactions, eat almost anything, and they have efficient reproductive capacities.

There are two types of rats that have invaded North America: The Norway Rat or Brown Rat (Rattus norvegicus) and the Black Rat (Rattus rattus). These two species are closely related but maintain distinctly different characteristics.

The black rat was the first rat to appear in the cities in the 1700's, and when the Norway Rat was introduced a little later, it displaced the black rat across the country except in some isolated areas in the south. It is reported that the black rat is restricted to attics and trees in those areas.

Most of us have a negative connotation of rats, which is largely due to the denigration of the animal in all sorts of literature and in the movies. If you ever seen the movie "Ben", you know exactly what I mean. There was more fictional anthropomorphism (the act of defining human characteristics to animals) than I could handle in a couple of hours. Another, often exaggerated, aspect of these animals is their size. The average adult male weighs only about a pound and measures 16 inches in length.

I surely don't put rats into the same category of vermin as cockroaches, mosquitoes, and ticks. To know them may not lead to loving them as a pet, but to understand them as animals is good knowledge to have.

Many kids like rats as pets. But mothers are not big fans for a lot of reasons. But I think the rat is one of the best pets for kids six and older. Actually, I think kids like reptiles and rodents as pets, because it makes their mother squirm. But that is another story.

So this is just the beginning of the life of the rat. I will write more about them occasionally. All yucks and ughs aside, they can make wonderful pets that rarely bite, which makes them much better pets than most any other small animal.

Caliguire is Restaurateur of the Year

The Western Chapter of the Pennsylvania Restaurant Association (PRA) named Joe Caliguire, owner of Sarafino's authentic Italian restaurants, "Restaurateur of the Year" in a gala ceremony at the Renaissance Pittsburgh Hotel last month.

HONORS

Sarafino's, with locations in Sewickley and Crafton, has been overflowing with customers, especially since a recent restaurant review gave Sarafino's three and a half out of four stars.

Caliguire was happy with the review, especially the part that said, "It feels like a place that's been there forever, timeless in the way of great neighborhood restaurants, capturing the constancy and welcoming personality of a big, happy family."

"Our recipe for success is simple," said Caliguire. "The best, freshest ingredients blended according to family recipes passed down through generations and served from our family to yours."

One of the highest honors for a restaurateur is the recognition of his peers. This award given annually recognizes significant professional and operational accomplishments, as well as major achievements on behalf of the foodservice industry.

Caliguire fulfilled a lifelong dream when he opened Sarafino's in Crafton in October 2001. The second of four children, the Caliguire's grew up working at their grandmother's pizza shop in Robinson.

A graduate and football alumnus of Temple University, he spent some time working in sales until the late 1990s when he opened La Pizza del Pazzo in the Strip District.

It was there his dream of having a family Italian restaurant was rekindled.

Sarafino's is his way of expressing his passion for food, family and friends. Customers are treated like family.

JOE CALIGUIRE toasts to many more good years in the restaurant business — one satisfied customer at a time.

In January of 2003, Joe opened a second location in Sewickley, where he serves as the head chef.

While his wife, Kellie, and dad, Sarafino, oversee the Crafton store, he adds the same charm to the Sewickley restaurant — a charm that exudes passion for what the Caliguire's live for: food, family and friends.

Sarafino's is located at 431 Beaver St., Sewickley, PA 15143. The restaurant is open Tuesday-Thursday from 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.; Friday & Saturday from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Child safety focus at Heritage Valley

BUCKLE UP!

Heritage Valley Health System is promoting national Child Passenger Safety Week with the announcement of its Buckle Up Baby Car Seat Loaner Program.

Funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT), the loaner program provides car seats for families from Allegheny, Beaver, Butler and Lawrence counties and those from Columbiana, Ohio, and Hancock, W. Va.

These car seats are made available to help needy and low income families follow the law and keep children safe when riding in vehicles.

The Buckle Up Baby Car Seat Loaner Program has car seats to fit babies/children from birth to 80 pounds depending on whether your program has infant, convertible or booster seats.

The Buckle Up Baby Car Seat Loaner Program and

PennDOT will celebrate Child Passenger Safety Week from Feb. 13-19. The theme chosen for Pennsylvania is "Life is Precious...Buckle Up!"

This theme demonstrates the importance of child passenger safety as well as pre-teen, teen and adult seat belt use.

Under Pennsylvania's child passenger safety law, all drivers are responsible for securing children in the appropriate child restraint system.

■ All children from birth to age 4 must be secured in an approved child safety seat anywhere in the vehicle.

Violators of this primary law are subject to a fine up to $100 plus court costs, EMS, Cat Fund and administrative fees, bringing the ticket up to $180.

■ Children age 4 to 8 must be secured in a seat belt system and appropriate child booster seat anywhere in the vehicle.

Violators of this secondary law are subject to a fine of up to $100 plus EMS, Cat Fund and administrative fees, bringing the ticket total up to $150.

■ All children age 8 to 18 must be secured in a seat belt system anywhere in the vehicle.

Violators of this secondary law are subject to a $10 fine plus EMS, Cat Fund and administrative fees, bringing the ticket total to $60.

To make sure everyone in the family is buckled correctly, follow these rules for safe travel:

1) Read both the car seat instructions and the vehicle owner's manual before installing car seats.

2) All children under 13 should ride in the back seat.

If you need to rent a car seat, contact Heritage Valley Health System at 724-773-4560.

Minimally Invasive Surgery

(Feb. 9, 2005) – Minimally invasive surgery or laparoscopic surgery uses a camera (laparoscope) to clearly visualize the interior of the body. This type of surgery decreases both post-surgery pain, and the recovery and rehabilitation time associated with "open" surgery. During laparoscopy, surgical procedures are performed through very small incisions in the abdomen using pencil thin specialized instruments. Depending on the organ or method, these procedures may be referred to as laparoscopic, thoroscopic or endoscopic.

Today minimally invasive surgery is used to replace faulty heart valves and to perform coronary-bypass procedures. These procedures can be diagnostic: colonoscopies are routinely used for early detection of colon/rectal cancer; endoscopy allows physicians to easily examine the upper GI tract; arthroscopic surgery has revolutionized knee surgery with quick recovery and minimal pain. Many surgeries that used to require lengthy hospital stays now only require a one to three day stay. Gallbladder removal is routinely performed on an out-patient basis. Colon resections, appendectomy and even gastric bypass surgery can all be done through small incisions in the hands of an advanced laparoscopic surgeon.

"Minimally invasive surgery can benefit the patient by offering faster recovery and often less pain than traditional surgery," says advanced laparoscopic surgeon, Geoffrey Wilcox, MD, Co-Director of Bariatric Surgery for Heritage Valley Health System. These procedures may also require less anesthesia, and the chance of infection is lower. For more information on minimally invasive surgery, visit Heritage Valley Health System's website at www.heritagevalley.org.

PARTY PLANNERS

Auxiliary prepares for centennial

The year was 1905 when a group of Sewickley women gathered at the Academy Avenue home of Mrs. A. B. Starr to form the Auxiliary of Sewickley Valley Hospital.

Today, 100 years young with millions of dollars raised and countless hours of volunteer time provided for their community hospital, the auxiliary is still going strong.

"This is going to be a memorable year of celebration," said Charlotte Bober, auxiliary president. "Events are being planned to honor our past, cherish our present and prepare for an exciting future."

Activities planned thus far are a cookbook titled "A Century of Serving" with 250 appetizer and dessert recipes due for sale in early spring; a "birthday" celebration geared to the community children scheduled to coincide with the July 18 founding; articles in the news and displays around the Village to highlight the auxiliary's history; and a black-tie dinner dance at the Edgeworth Club on June 25 to recognize auxiliary contributions, its past presidents and call chairs over the years.

Linda Ruckert, Eileen Stanley, Peggy Robinette, Dorothy Price, Laureen Novissimo, Elsie Keczmer, Ruth Lessman, Kelly Kline and Carrie Duffield are members of the auxiliary board.

Serving on the 100th anniversary committee are Co-chairs Dotty Price and Peggy Robinette, Bober, Ruckert and Keczmer and members Carolyn Frink, Gloria Berry, Diane Snow, Mary Jane Williams and hospital auxiliary liaison/advisor, Irene Dailey, director of volunteer and community services.

For information on any of these activities or about joining the Auxiliary of Sewickley Valley Hospital, call Irene Dailey at 412-749-7052.

SPOTLIGHT

Pysanky translates faith into egg artwork

By Sarah Mills

Herald contributor

Pysanky is the ancient art of dyeing Easter eggs practiced by the Slavs of Eastern Europe.

Once an expression of their pagan beliefs, the Slavic people adapted the practice to become a symbol of their newfound hope in Christianity.

"Pysanky" means, "to write." The art form is therefore interpreted to mean "writing on eggs."

Harry Coe, a recognized pysanky artist and member of St. John's Orthodox Church in Ambridge, has been interested in the art of pysanky since he first learned of it nearly 40 years ago.

"My wife's cousin was staying with us during spring term of college in 1963-69," says Coe. "He asked me if I'd like to try it. That's where it all started, with him."

Coe has been teaching a class on pysanky at St. John's for almost 18 years.

"I was teaching some of my close friends at home," he says. "People asked me about doing a class."

The art of pysanky takes about an hour to learn, but one egg takes about two hours to complete.

"It's very simple," says Coe. "We have people to show you the basics and take you even further. It just depends how far you want to go with it."

The eggs are dyed using a wax-resist method with aniline dye, chosen because of its brightness. Basic designs are drawn in white wax on the egg. Then the egg is dipped in dye, starting with light colors and progressing to darker ones.

Coe himself has practiced pysanky on nearly every kind of egg, from giant ostrich eggs to tiny cockatiel eggs.

The class uses Ukrainian-style patterns, which are mostly geometric.

"There are some with flowers and horses and such," says Coe, "but it's basically geometry. That's why it's so easy."

Designs used by pysanky artists include wheat, signifying a bountiful harvest; animals (usually deer) signifying prosperity; a triangle representing the Trinity; dots representing Mary's tears; and an eight-pointed star, which first signified the sun, then Christ.

The class is open to anyone who is interested, 10 years old and over.

"I've had kids as young as five," says Coe, "but the attention span is just not there for the kids, which is why I ask that no one be younger than 10."

"I've had people over 80 years old in the class. An 87-year-old lady who said

HARRY COE (above) has been teaching pysanky for almost 18 years. (At right, front) Melissa Benish, 12, of Oakdale, traces a design on the egg before the waxing process begins.

Photos by Tim Edmonson

she'd always wanted to learn pysanky. You could see it in her face how much she loved it. She just lit up!"

Coe's enthusiasm for the art of pysanky is shared by almost all of his students. He has six instructors teaching with him and about 15 to 20 people per evening.

"I've had as many as 65 people come in one night. I try to keep the class smaller, so everybody has a chance to learn," says Coe.

Class numbers vary because, says Coe, "It's not a 'must' thing. You don't have to be there every night. The class is very laid back!"

Classes will be held every Friday through March 18 from 7-9 p.m. at St. John's Education Center, Fifth Street and Elm Road in Ambridge.

The cost is $1 per session. For more information on the classes, call Coe at 724-375-5384.

Chatham Baroque at SUMC

Guest Laura Heimes, soprano, joins Chatham Baroque in "Valentine from London: A Romantic Program of Love and Longing" on Friday, Feb. 11, at 8 p.m. at Sewickley United Methodist Church in Sewickley.

With the city of London as the third stop on this virtual "tour" of different cities, the program will focus on music by some of the most renowned composers from 17th- and 18th-century London.

The program explores the breadth of vocal repertory heard in London in those centuries, from heart-wrenching lute songs by the master, John Dowland, to frivolous or comedic songs from the theater by John Oswald and Thomas Arne or the masterpiece, "Oh, Let Me Weep" by Henry Purcell, scored for soprano, violin and basso continuo by Handel.

Ticket prices are $18 general admission and $14 seniors, $8 students and low-income.

Tickets are available at the door or by calling ProArts Ticket Service at 412-384-3353.

Jordan is also part of the cast.

The show runs through Feb. 20, Thursday-Sunday at 8 p.m. at the Terminal Buildings, 31 Terminal Way, South Side.

SUMC TURKEY DINNER

600 TURKEY dinners were served up at the 57th annual Sewickley United Methodist Church Dinner last week. Nearly 200 others had to be turned away at this popular event. It takes the work of many volunteers, such as Roger Wright on left) and Byron Harriger, to prepare a full course Thanksgiving feast in February for hundreds of church neighbors and friends. (Above) Two Gilmore families meet for the first time. They are (from left) Sandy Gilmore, Daisy Crawford, Ruth Gilmore and Sharon and Jake Gilmore. Jovanka Koledin retires after 54 years

By Rachel Weaver
Staff writer

Sixty years ago in Romania, Jovanka Koledin argued with her father about the gown she would wear to the town's upcoming ball.

SAYING GOOD-BYE

He couldn't understand why his 20-year-old daughter wouldn't buy a simple dress like everyone else.

Jovanka wanted to be a little more original. Unwilling to conform, the young Romanian went to her father's farm where the family's peacocks were shedding their rich feathers to make room for thick winter coats.

She collected the feathers and sewed them onto a green petticoat, saving the fluffy down ones for a vest. With the remaining feathers, she created an arched headpiece that sprang out in every direction.

When Jovanka entered the ballroom the night of the event, every head turned and men lined up to dance with the beautiful mystery girl in the elegant peacock gown.

Ten years later, her passion for design landed her the job she would spend the next five decades working.

This year marks the end of 28-year-old Jovanka's career as a decorator and master seamstress with her Sewickley business, Koledin Decorating.

JOVANKA KOLEDIN leaves a decades' long career as interior designer.

Jovanka married Dusan Koledin in Yugoslavia in 1947. They immigrated to the United States in 1949 and found a home in Ambridge with a family who had worked for her grandparents.

She was soon hired at Gaetano Interiors in Sewickley, where she spent the next seven years learning her trade as a sewer of drapes, slipcovers and upholstery.

The Romanian had never seen a slip cover in Europe, but she was familiar with the process it took to make one.

"In Europe, every woman knows how to hold a needle," she says.

During her childhood, Jovanka made her own dolls and sewed them new dresses daily. Later in life, she made clothes for herself and her family by duplicating outfits she saw in movies.

After several years working for her Italian boss, Jovanka's regular clients requested she start her own business.

"People put you up and down," she says. "I was a very hard worker, but without them, I could not succeed."

In 1957, she appeased her customers by renting out a one-bedroom space for her business in Pittsburgh. Two years later, she moved back to Sewickley and worked on Beaver Street for five years before buying the Broad Street building that houses Monday's Child and Perfect (among other local businesses) in 1965.

With their son, Sasha, the Koledins worked in the front of the building for more than a decade, designing and creating draperies, slip covers and upholstery.

"Everyone knew us," says Jovanka. "They called us the 'Team of Koledin Steam.'"

When Dusan passed away in 1977, Jovanka moved the business upstairs and continued working with a few assistants and the sewing machines she'd bought secondhand more than 20 years earlier.

The designer remembers each home she decorated over the years.

"You have to like your job. If you work for money, forget it. It was a great honor to do my job. As soon as I walked into these beautiful, rich homes, I knew what I should do. It would have been a terrible embarrassment not to have left them in good shape."

Jovanka worked with interior designers, such as Sewickley's Richard Smith, to incorporate the right colors, patterns and designs into homes.

At one client's home on Scaife Road, Jovanka worked with silk fabric with silk trim to add original draperies to each room. Another customer hired her to decorate every room each time she bought a new home.

Jovanka is reminded of the gratitude her customers have for her work almost everyday. One client loves telling the seamstress the draperies hanging in her bedroom remind her each morning of her good fortune for being able to afford the right decorations for her home.

"It's an unbelievable pleasure when people come to see me or call me to thank me," says Jovanka. "I'm sorry I can't manage any more."

In addition to the quality of her craft, Jovanka prides herself on her originality. In all her years, she never copied a print from a magazine. Every design was original work to ensure she made something completely unique for each client.

In addition to all the homes she decorated, Jovanka also did blocking and finishing work for needlepoint projects from The Porcupine and sewed Christmas stockings for the store.

In 1990, Jovanka's grandson, Sasha Jr., opened Koledin's Rejuvenation Center, a natural health store, in her building. He later moved on, but Jovanka can still be seen working the store every once in a while.

But health complications have made it too difficult for her to climb to her second floor decorating office.

Years of cramped hands from hours of sewing have left Jovanka with a case of carpal tunnel syndrome. But if it weren't for her health telling her to stop, she wouldn't.

"I worked until the last minute, but when you feel these cramps, you're done. Like it or not," she says.

Dental Care Shouldn't Be Like Pulling Teeth

Unfortunately, for most pets, it is. As a result, oral disease is the most frequently diagnosed health problem affecting adult dogs and cats.

Periodontal disease can be prevented. The American Veterinary Dental Society recommends three very important steps:

1. See your veterinarian for a dental exam
2. Start a dental care routine at home for your pet
3. Get regular veterinary checkups to ensure proper oral health

Follow these guidelines for proper dental care and you're well on your way to keeping your pet happy and healthy for a lifetime!

Students relive history with March on Washington

Edgeworth Elementary students participated in a re-enactment of the historic Civil Rights March on Washington, D.C., to kick off Black History Month activities and programs.

QUAKER VALLEY

The children dressed in their "Sunday best" to make a little history of their own.

As the "bus" convoy traveled through the school building, it made stops along the way for students to learn more about the days of segregation.

Students also viewed a video presentation on Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I have a dream" speech.

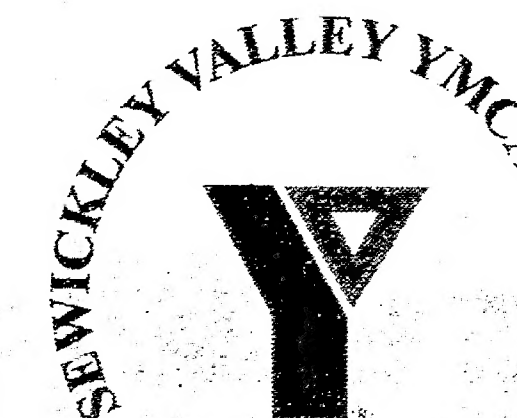

Teachers Noreen Coyne, Elise Woodburn and Kim Wolfendale organized this activity.

Shirley Wormsley, retired Osborne teacher, described some of her experiences during the Civil Rights struggle of the 1960s.

Other events have been planned throughout February in honor of Black History Month.

Laughlin Preschool - 12 years and growing

For Karen Borland, preschool director at Laughlin Center Preschool, reviewing the first 11 years of operation is a little like a parent looking back at a child's early years.

"During our first 11 years, our goal has been to help build a program that provides a solid foundation for young learners in a fun and nurturing environment that promotes self-esteem. We are so proud of how the program has grown, and how we continue to meet the needs of preschoolers in our community," says Borland.

Laughlin Center Preschool is now accepting registration for the 2005-06 school year. Classes will begin on Sept. 6.

• Two-Day Program: Tuesday and Thursday, 9 to 11:30 a.m.

For a 3-year-olds' introduction into a school setting, the Two-Day Program is a good fit. This program offers creative play, story, and together times, along with special activities and language enrichment. Class size is limited to 12 children, and children must turn 3 by Sept. 1 to enroll.

• Three-Day Program: Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 9 to 11:30 a.m.

In addition to regular preschool activities, the 4-year-olds are introduced to pre-reading and pre-math activities. Class size is limited to 16 children, and children must turn 4 by Sept. 1 to enroll.

• The Pre-K Program: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, 12:30 to 3 p.m.

The Pre-K Program will offer reading, math, science, and language enrichment activities along with favorite preschool activities. To enroll, a child must be 5 by Dec. 31. Class size is limited to 16 children.

Laughlin Center Preschool is accredited by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs (NAEYC), and is licensed by the Pennsylvania Department of Education, private Academic Schools.

For more information, or to make an appointment to visit the preschool, call Laughlin Center at 412-741-4087.

Children's Community helps develop child's full potential

Elementary Years

Montessori Children's Community is a licensed, private academic school for children age 31 months through 12 years (6th grade).

Established in 1991, and located in the village of Sewickley, the school follows the teachings of Dr. Maria Montessori and her goal of creating a stimulating environment that inspires children of all ages to learn.

School's Mission

The mission of Montessori Children's Community is to provide a nurturing, educational environment that develops the whole child in a way that allows each child to reach his or her fullest potential.

Children's House Years

A young child typically begins his or her Montessori education at the Children's House level.

The mixed-age classroom offers children ages 31 months through age 6 the opportunity to learn side-by-side in an environment that is rich in choices and in self-discovery.

Building on a child's house experience, young students continue their education in the elementary program for grades 1-6.

Following Montessori principles, children are grouped by varying ages in one of two classrooms to provide opportunities for broad social development and learning. Included in an elementary student's daily work are: language arts, advanced math, botany and zoology, history, geography, and science.

Admission

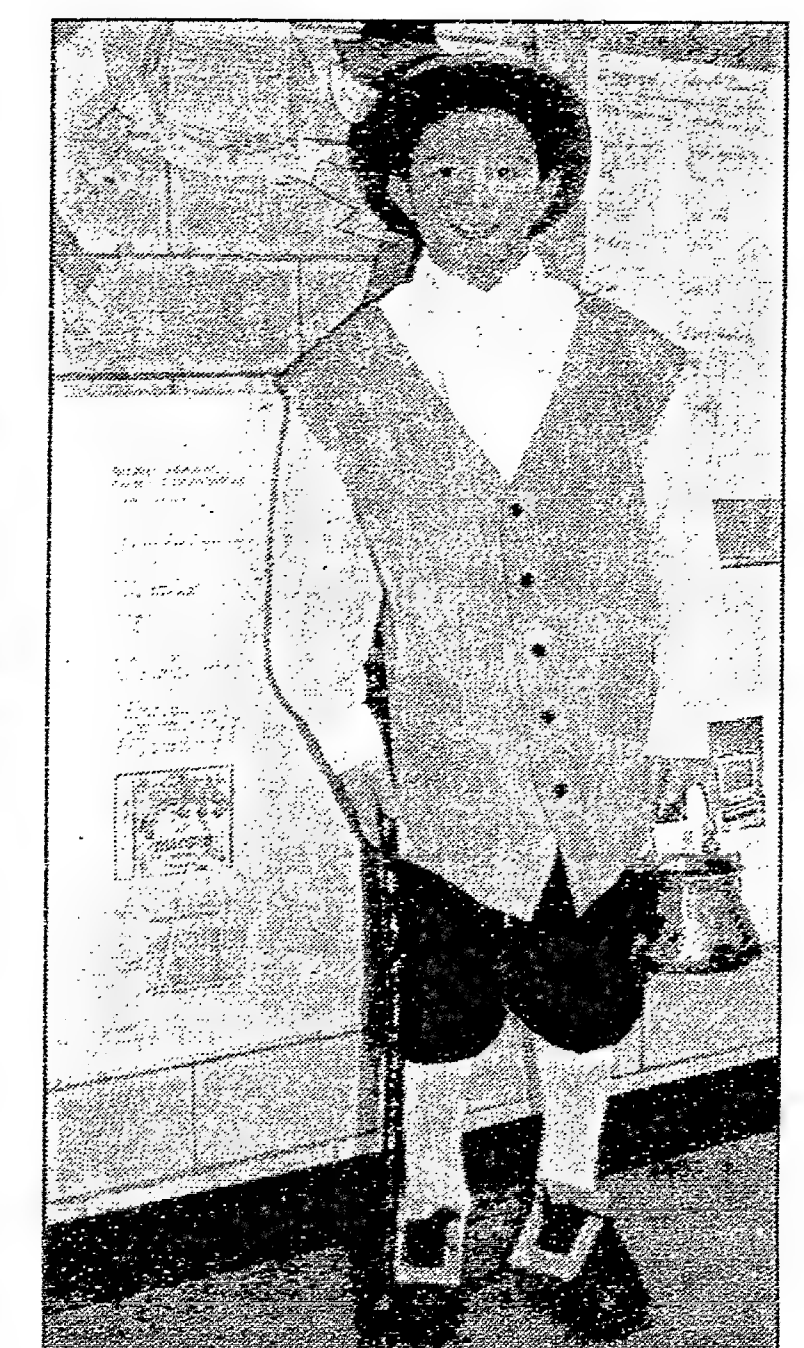

Interested families are encouraged to experience firsthand the Montessori learning environment by scheduling an appointment to visit the school. Call or e-mail the school office to schedule your appointment at 412-741-8982.

The school will be holding its annual winter open house on Sunday, Feb. 13, from 2 to 5 p.m. All interested families are welcome to attend.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS WEEK

STUDENTS OF St. James School in Sewickley explored the world through some of its cultures last Wednesday on Multi-Cultural Day. (Above) 5th graders Denica Moore, Steve Zingarelli, Nick Napoleone and Matt Rheingrover, sing "Turning Japanese" by the Kinks; (Top) Colleen Chauman and Jenna Ponticello look at a hand-crafted Kenyan flag; (Middle) Tom Diffendal, Anthony Guy and Abby Blaha study a bamboo plant; and Luke Lucovich dresses as a leprechaun.

Justice mission founder visits Sewickley

By Dona S. Dreeland

Editor

GLOBAL FOCUS

Members of the International Justice Mission (IJM) are already on the ground in countries devastated by December's tsunami.

Their contribution to the relief efforts there will take its shape from its founding statement: to help people suffering injustice who cannot rely on local authorities for aid.

In Southeast Asia, IJM's focus will be the children.

Gary Haugen, president and CEO, visited Christ Church at Grove Farm on Sunday to explain his work on behalf of the poor and oppressed around the world.

"After the tsunami, it's like these children are on a shipwreck, cast into an ocean full of sharks," Haugen described.

If the sex trade resumes as the cities are rebuilt, his agency will be ready to document and monitor conditions of abuse, educate the church and public about the crimes and then mobilize intervention on behalf of the victims.

Once a Washington, D.C. lawyer, Haugen was called by the United Nations to travel to Rwanda in the spring of 1994 to investigate the genocide of tribe-on-tribe violence. One million people were slaughtered.

He returned from the mass graves to his ordinary world, a man changed by what he had seen.

Having recognized God's passion for justice in the world and his love for the people he created, Haugen was certain of the Christian's mission to work and to pray against oppression in whatever form it takes.

IJM, founded in 1997, has helped release young girls from prostitution; open doors of prisons for those who have been illegally detained; and break the chains of bondage holding men, women and children in abusive and illegal slavery.

When notified of abuse, Haugen's agency activates a battery of legal professionals and other law enforcement personnel inside a particular country and in the states to intervene on the victims' behalf.

Through casework, a team gathers facts about the abuse of power and presents it to local authorities, using the country's domestic laws prohibiting the injustice to obtain relief.

A Christ-centered organization, victims are rescued regardless of their religious beliefs, ethnicity or gender. IJM provides emergency relief, perpetrator accountability, prevention and victim care.

"God's call to do the work of justice is clear," Haugen told the congregation, "but the magnitude..."

Millions of children around the world are forced into prostitution every year. Poverty, abuse and imprisonment separate millions more from the very best lives God had planned for them.

With field offices and partnerships in Africa, South Asia, Southeast Asia and Latin America, Haugen and IJM have responded to the Prophet Isaiah's words: "Learn to do good, seek justice, rescue the oppressed, defend the orphan, plead for the widow."

"The good news about injustice is that God is against it," Haugen assured.

"God wants to rescue, and we're (a part of) the plan."

Carl Baltzer, owner of Pizza Roma, loses battle to cancer

Carl Baltzer, 46, died peacefully after a four-and-one-half-year battle with cancer on Feb. 6, 2005, at his home in Economy.

He was born May 16, 1958, in Mansfield, Ohio, and grew up on the North Side of Pittsburgh.

As a young man, he was driven to succeed against the odds. His entrepreneurial spirit took him into the restaurant business. He owned and operated Pizza Roma in Sewickley for the past 21 years.

His love of fishing drove him to Florida to try to make the big catch, and his love of taking a risk took him to Las Vegas.

He enjoyed spending time at camp with his family and close friends. Anyone who knew Carl knew how much he loved his Corvette.

He loved life and made it a point to love it to its fullest every day he was alive.

It was most important to him to always help out his family and friends. He was a father figure to some of his staff, nieces and nephews. They would go to him for advice, as he was so patient and understanding.

He was a brother Mason of the Doric Lodge 630 of Sewickley and chairman of the Ricky Manko Diabetic Memorial Fund in which he held benefits.

He sponsored both a men's

Carl Baltzer

and a women's softball team.

The Pizza Roma is currently sponsoring an indoor soccer team.

Thought for the Week

It has been said that Lincoln was a failure in almost everything he tried except the things that counted most...He failed in business. 1831-32: elected to state legislature, 1834; defeated for speaker, 1838; defeated for elector, 1840; defeated for land officer, 1843; defeated for Congress, 1843; elected to Congress, 1846; defeated for re-election, 1848; defeated for Vice President, 1856; defeated for senate, 1858; elected President of the United States, 1860.

He once had this to say, during one of his early, unsuccessful campaigns for public office: "Every man is said to have his peculiar ambition. Whether it be true or not, I can say for one that I have no other so great as that of being truly esteemed of my fellow men, by rendering myself worth of their esteem. How far I shall succeed in gratifying that ambition is yet to be developed. I am young and unknown to many of you. I have no wealthy or popular relatives to recommend me. My case is thrown exclusively upon the independent voters of this country, and if elected, they will have conferred a favor on me, for which I shall be unremitting in my labors to compensate. But if the good people in their wisdom shall see fit to keep me in the background, I have been too familiar with disappointments to be very much chagrined."

This is the man whose birthday we commemorate this week.

Sewickley inching up on rival Quaker's top slot

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

Seven years of hard work are paying off for Panthers head coach Erik Hoolahan.

The 14-3 Sewickley boys are in the midst of one of their finest seasons on record.

The team is making headway in all facets of the game and sneaking up on rivals and perennial division champions Quaker Valley.

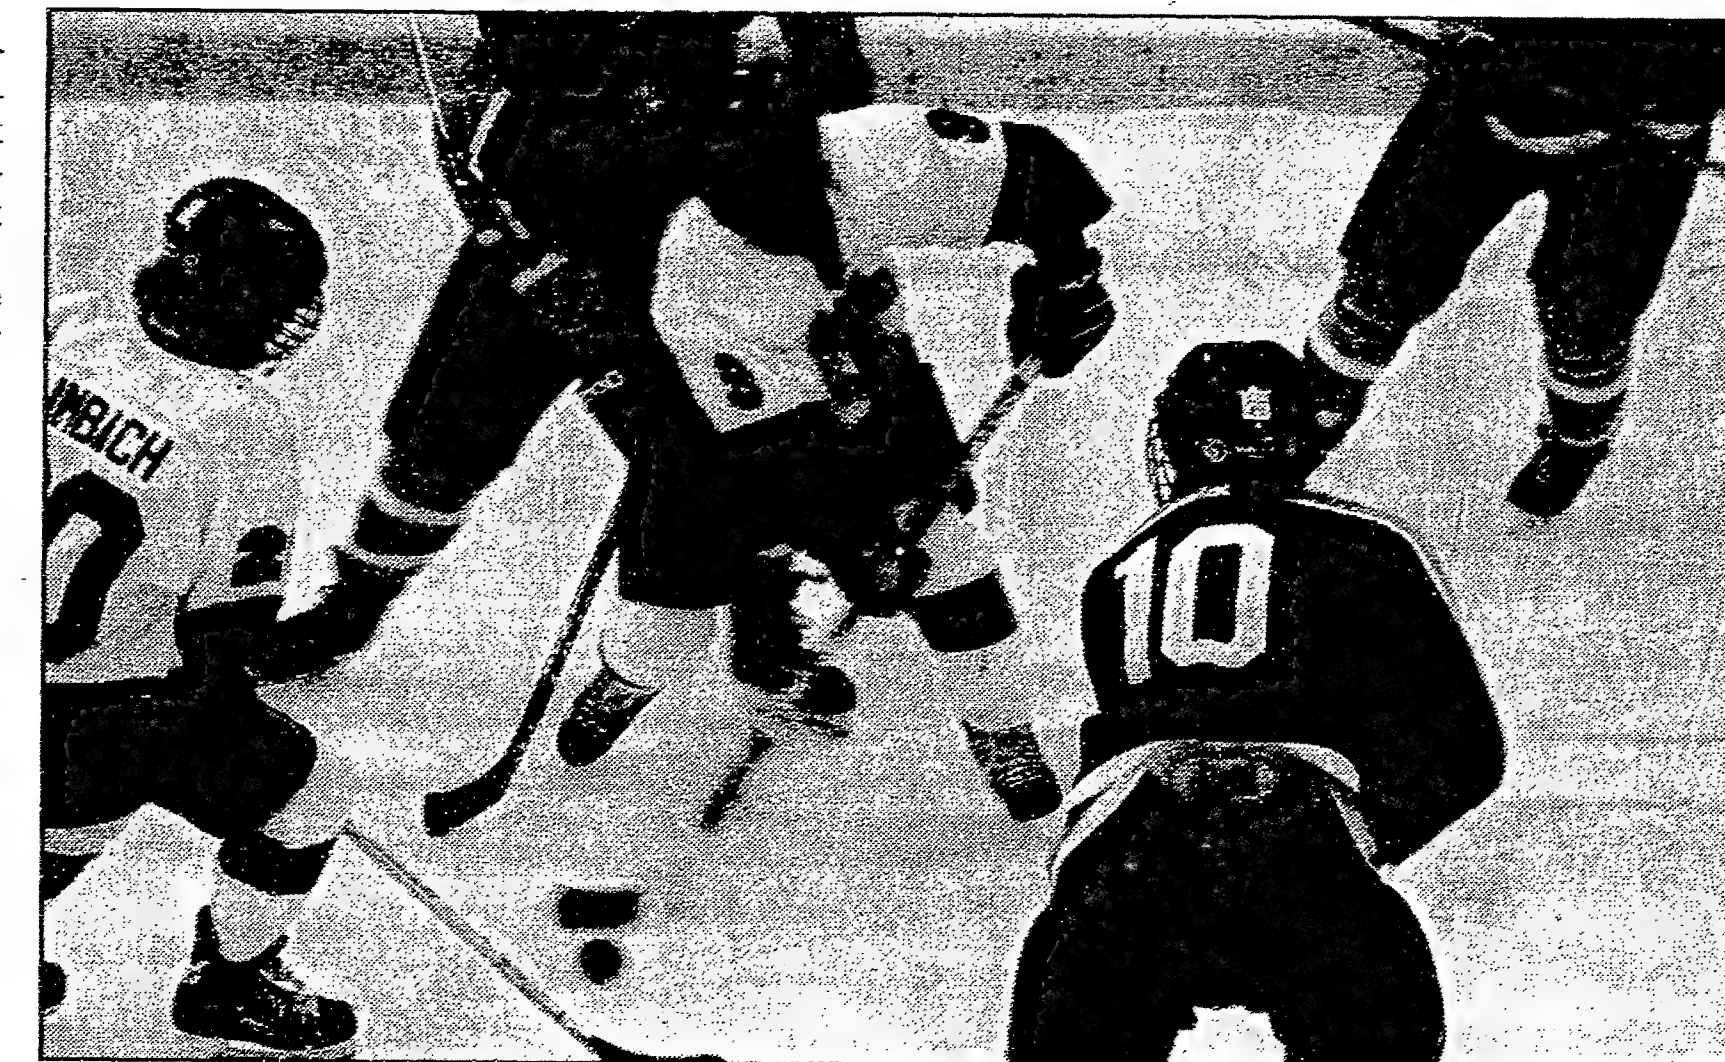

"We're focusing on our goal and taking it one game at a time," he said. "Every game is big when your trying to chase down a team like QV."

The 14-3 Panthers gained a lot of ground last week, defeating Westmont Hilltop 6-3 for the first time in history and claiming victories against Quigley and Ferndale as well.

To top the week off, seniors Trevor Heck, Alec Shannon, and Artie Woods were honored at Friday's Senior's Night match and the Panthers scored a season-high 14 points against the Yellowjackets.

Heck scored four goals, as did junior Brad Watts.

led the team in points with two goals and seven assists and junior Connor Blood, Sewickley Herald's Athlete of the Week, added one goal and four assists.

Put simply, the Panthers were unstoppable.

And they are determined to remain unstoppable with big games against Mars, QV, and number-one ranked Serra Catholic approaching.

"We have a tough schedule going down the stretch,"

Hoolahan said. "I've been telling the boys all along, 'you're going to have to beat [tough teams] eventually, why not do it now?'"

Seven-year veteran Hoolahan said the boys are ready.

"We're focusing on our goal and taking it one game at a time."

— Erik Hoolahan, head coach

"We just focus on what we do well and come out and work our system," he said.

And when a team with five all-stars comes out and performs to their potential, championships are won.

That, along with a lot of hard work, is precisely what Hoolahan and his Panthers are banking on.

"Our record is great," he said, "but that's meaningless going into the playoffs."

Hoolahan said the Panthers need to be disciplined and continue to give 100 percent.

And if anyone knows how to get a championship effort out

QV All-Star makes most of days in America

By Jon Paul Creese

Will Forser will have some stories to tell his friends in Gothenburg, Sweden when he returns in the spring.

He will have some boasting to do as well, if he chooses.

Forser, a foreign exchange student and senior defender for the successful Quaker Valley Hockey Team, was named as an alternate for the PIHL West All-Star Team.

He also plays for the Pittsburgh Predators, a traveling league that is ranked second in the nation.

But for Forser, it's not just about hockey.

"It's a great opportunity to learn the language and the culture," said Forser, whose English is only slightly broken. "My uncle [was a foreign exchange student] in Chicago, and he spoke well of it."

Forser, who plays hockey in Sweden, said the size of the U.S. is a bit confounding.

"It's so much bigger," he said. "My country has nine million inhabitants, it's the size of California."

"Everything is a greater distance; there is more of everything."

But Forser is getting along pretty well.

He made several friends at Quaker Valley and hopes to keep in touch with them after he goes back to Sweden in June.

He also hopes to come back to Pittsburgh to attend Carnegie Mellon as an engineer major, explaining that academics out-rank hockey.

And QV, among the most advanced public high schools in the nation, is providing him with academic opportunities as well as some of the best coaching in PIHL A West Division.

"He's taught me a lot about every situation," Forser said of defensive coach Yuri Krivokhija.

"They know a lot about hockey," he added of Head Coach Kevin Quinn and assistant, Jim Miller.

Quinn took the reins in 1996 when the team was formed and quickly elevated the Quakers to champion status.

"I'm really impressed," Forser said of the freshman talent. "QV has a great future."

of a team, Hoolahan does.

He was twice named to the PIHL West Division All-Star Team coaching staff, earning the head coach slot this season. "It's an honor," he said. "But it's really less about me; it's an opportunity to coach some great players."

Hoolahan said one of the best things about coaching at the All-Star level is the flexibility so much talent provides.

"Every line is a power line," he said. "I feel very lucky."

That makes Hoolahan doubly-blessed because with all-star performers, Shannon, Heck, Blood, Scott Limbach and Rich Thornburgh, every Panther line is a power line.

The Academy travels to Freeport Thursday before hosting what is certain to be a spirited backyard rivalry against the Quakers Monday night at the RMU Sports Complex.

"Good teams don't roll over," Hoolahan acknowledged, but he believes the Panthers are ready.

BASKETBALL

Panthers beat Quigley Spartans

Sewickley out to protect championship throne

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

It's ironic that a foul by the Panther defense enabled the Spartans to put the first point on the board Friday night as that same defense allowed only one additional basket the entire first period.

The game leveled out slightly as Quigley made a short comeback in the second period, but were out-played 45-27 in the second half.

The playoff-bound Panthers claimed a decisive 68-44 victory to close out the regular season at 8-3 in the section.

"I was very pleased," Coach Win Palmer said of the win. "That was the worst Quigley has lost all year."

"When we played them at home, it was a close game to the end," he said. "It's a good sign of how much we've improved."

Junior Matt Palmer led the Panthers with 23 points and 11 rebounds. He netted four three-pointers and collected three points on a foul in the fourth period.

"Matt has given us solid play from point guard," Palmer said of the junior who averages 16 to 18 points a game.

George Raftis, senior guard, followed with 18 points and 15 rebounds.

"They started playing man to man, so we went inside to George and Luke," Palmer said.

Brooks, who was put on the starting lineup in mid-season, scored 11 points, six of which came in the third period during a Panther pull away.

"Early in the season, we were like a square peg trying to fit into a round hole," Palmer said of a tough season for roster changes. "We had to make some adjustments."

Palmer, who has coached for 24 years, claiming four state titles, said he never made as many mid-season changes in a single season.

"We went from a full-court, full-speed team to a half court, power oriented team. The transition has taken awhile," he said. "I'm proud of what the entire coaching staff has done."

He credits the players as well. "The resilience of these guys is incredible," Palmer said.

The Panthers played seven of 16 games at home this year and went 7-0.

GEORGE RAFTIS, senior, goes up for two.

B-I-o-o-d spells out first victory over Westmont Hilltop

By Jon Paul Creese
Sports editor

Connor Blood is quickly making a name for himself in the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Hockey League West Division.

The junior forward has helped lift the Panthers into one of their finest seasons and was named to the PIHL West Division All-Star First Team for his efforts.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

"What makes Connor a great player is his work ethic on and off the ice and his ability to go out and play both ends of the ice," head coach Erik Hoolahan said, "whether that's beating a man in the corner or fighting off a defender."

"He makes everyone around him a better player," he added. "He spreads the puck around ... his style of play is perfect for us."

Blood, Sewickley Herald's Athlete of the Week, has been playing organized hockey since he joined the Pittsburgh

Wild Cats when he was six and also plays for the AAA Aviators.

"He is working hard for both teams," Hoolahan said. "He cares about both teams."

Blood certainly cared about the Panthers last week as he netted four goals in a 6-3 victory over Westmont Hilltop, edging the Academy closer to the number one division slot.

"My line really stepped up," he said of Brad Watts and All-Star junior Scott Limbach. "They are there for every goal I score."

That cohesion, which is shared by the rest of the team, could be the catalyst that earns the Panthers a title this year.

"You've got to come out and give 100 percent," Blood said after another victory (14-0) against the Ferndale Yellowjackets Friday for Senior's Night at the RMU Sports Complex when he racked up another five points.

And there is still a long road ahead with many challenges as the Panthers face a tough season-ending schedule with games against Mars, Quaker Valley and number-one ranked Serra Catholic.

Blood said he is confident the Panthers, who defeated Serra last year, will be able to do it again.

He said they can also take QV. "We have a more talented team this year," he explained. "We just need to focus and add that extra spark."

"It's not worth doing if you're not going to go as hard as you can," he added.

That's the kind of leadership the Panthers have rallied around all year and will bring into the playoffs.

Blood says the key to success in the playoff season will be hard work and utilizing the team's strengths.

"We have a fast team," he said. "We need to use our speed and work together."

"We need to limit the mistakes," he added.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

You've heard it a million times, but it's a cliché because it's true - First Impressions Count. And even though "Don't judge a book by its cover" is also a popular cliché, buyers tend to ignore that one when comparing potential home purchases.

Put yourself in the buyers' shoes and step out to the curb to take a look. See anything that might not make the impression you desire? Consider the following "first glance" improvements.

Share The Love!

Betty Moraca
ABR, CRS, CRS, GRI

The front door should be inviting - paint or stain the entrance if it shows signs of chipping or peeling. Have a front porch? Dress it up with container gardens and sweep regularly, making it an attractive "outside room."

Check for other signs of peeling paint around the exterior and touchup where needed. Remember that buyers will be comparing your home to other similar homes, and every little detail that makes yours more appealing will pay off.

Of course, your landscaping makes an obvious first impression, so remove any dead or dying debris, fertilize the lawn and plant some flowering bushes if you need a little color.

Finally, your home looks great, so make sure it's well lit for the show! Don't overdo it, but do offer a well-lit doorway and walkways, and even "uplight" your better landscaping elements. If you show buyers "We love this home," then so will they!

Design offers duplex style

Gabled porches and Craftsman windows are showcased in the Donovan, a modern two-story duplex with a country cottage look. Brick veneer bases support slender wooden posts that frame the front porches and support their nostalgic gabled roofs.

Only the garages and covered patios share a common wall, so each unit's interior is well isolated from sounds in the other. Unit A and unit B are mirror images of each other.

Entering, you step into a large open area where the dining room, living room and kitchen flow together. Plenty of natural light washes in through two sets of wide windows that face the street.

Near the stairs, a clean-burning gas fireplace nestles into the living room's rear corner.

Cupboards wrap around two sides of the kitchen. Cabinets beneath the work island counter and a step-in pantry add to this abundance of storage space.

The master suite and utility room fill the back. An under-the-stairway storage area expands the roomy walk-in closet there.

Its bathroom has two doors. One opens off the hallway, and the other provides direct access from the master bedroom.

The garage links to the utility room, which is just a few steps from the kitchen. This feature comes in handy when unloading groceries in darkness or stormy weather.

Two bedrooms, a second bathroom and a wide storage closet are upstairs. The Donovan's front bedroom is slightly larger.

► A Chance To "Sea" The World

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR JOB

At a time when higher education costs continue to rise, there's actually a vocational training facility that does not charge entry-level students for tuition, room or board. Plus, it assures employment for its graduates.

The Paul Hall Center for Maritime Training and Education, affiliated with the Seafarers International Union (SIU), prepares students for successful careers as U.S. Merchant Mariners.

Based in Pinney Point, Md., the school offers entry-level training: a program for military veterans; ongoing vocational classes; academic support and more.

Students are responsible for the cost of travel to the school, clothing and pre-entry medical screening. Classes, meals and lodging are free for those in the unlicensed apprentice program. Graduates of the entry-level training program are guaranteed a first job aboard one of the SIU's contracted vessels.

The Merchant Marine is composed of men and women who crew U.S.-flag commercial vessels on the deep seas, inland waterways and Great Lakes. Although civilians, they are often referred to as the nation's "fourth arm of defense."

Since the founding of the United States, merchant mariners have played a vital support role in the nation's conflicts. For instance, some of the vessels they work on transport troops and military goods.

Though perhaps best known for its trainee program, the school also offers courses for veterans who have qualifying sea time in a deck or engine rating. Applicants must present a history of their assignments while in the military and an honorable discharge. Applicants cannot be on parole or probation and must have a valid driver's license.

► Countdown to Home Ownership

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR HOME

Purchasing a home involves a roller coaster of emotions: a pile of paperwork and nerves of steel. Beginning the process without a cursory course in home buying is not a wise venture. Here are steps along the way to expect on the way to your final destination—home ownership.

Step 1: Affordability: Before you visit a real estate agent, decide on a price range. The best way to do so is to sit down with a financial consultant or mortgage broker who will weigh your current debt against your income and savings.

Step 2: Finding a home: Finding your prospective home can be a time-consuming process. Consult with a real estate broker, who will have current listings and up-to-date information, or set out on your own search by visiting open houses.

Step 3: Making an offer: In most states, you'll be required to make a formal offer on the house in the form of a written contract. It will state your intended offer price as well as information on a down payment and proposed closing date.

Step 4: Securing a mortgage: Now that you know your purchase price, find a lender who will agree to lend you the money. Shop around for the best offer from several financial institutions, keeping in mind the current interest rate.

Step 5: Walk-through: In most cases, you'll be able to walk through the prospective home right before the closing to make sure the house is in the agreed-upon condition.

Step 6: The closing: You'll be required to sign paperwork and present fees, called closing costs. Examples of closing costs include: down payment, property taxes, attorney's fee, points, title insurance, clerical/processing costs, proof of homeowner's insurance.

After you've signed what seems like a million documents, and initiated a million more, you will receive the keys to your new home. Congratulations on being a homeowner!

► Inspect Car for Engine Leaks

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR CAR

We've all seen steaming cars on the side of the highway. Oftentimes we drive by, thinking, "That can't happen to me!" In fact, it can. An overheated engine due to cooling system failure is one of the most common causes of summer time roadside breakdowns. Here is how it works: The cooling system keeps your engine from burning itself up. But, when coolant is lost, or when a part malfunctions within the cooling system, the engine gets too hot and may eventually need to be replaced.

According to engineers at Gates Corporation, a worldwide belt and hose manufacturer, hoses are the most likely source of coolant loss leaks because they are structurally the weakest parts of the cooling system. They may develop micro-cracks within the hose tube that allow the coolant to attack the hose reinforcement. Over time, the yarn material will weaken. Accelerated by high under-the-hood heat and constant flexing, the hose could rupture or leak under normal pressure before it has reached its expected service life.

Before the summer driving season, have your neighborhood automotive technician check your cooling system and the hoses. To avoid an overheated engine due to coolant loss, Gates engineers recommend replacing the upper, lower and bypass cooling system hoses if they are over four years old or if they feel soft at the ends. After four years, the incidence of hose failure increases.

For more information on coolant leaks, visit www.gates.com/consumer.

Foster Volunteer cats

Attention Cat Lovers!

If you can answer yes to either of these questions, then FosterCat, Inc. invites you to become one of our foster families.

FosterCat is an all volunteer, non-profit organization committed to building a foster home network to provide temporary care for homeless cats and kittens until permanent, loving homes can be found.

Can't foster now, but still want to help? We also need transporters for kittens and help with fund-raising activities.

Do you enjoy the company of cats, but can't make the long-term commitment of ownership?

Are you concerned about the thousands of homeless kitties who are euthanized in city shelters each year?

Please call 412.481.9144 to volunteer, or visit our website at www.fostercat.org

AN AMERICAN REVOLUTION

...2005 ACURA RL

The crew at Acura has taken considerable time - about 10 years - to develop a new version of its corporate flagship. The result, however, should greatly please luxury-car shoppers. The latest RL is a high-style, high-tech and definitely high-performance model that fits with the rest of Acura's lineup. Aluminum is extensively used in key structural areas and bolt-on body panels - hood, trunk lid, etc. - to save weight. The leather- and wood-adorned interior is fitted with a satellite radio/navigation screen that includes real-time traffic-flow information in the top-20 metropolitan areas in the continental United States. No matter where you're going, it can direct you to 1.7-million street names. And there's no excuse for being late with a standard 300-horsepower 3.5-liter V6 that makes 75 horses more than the outgoing RL. A five-speed automatic transmission with steering-wheel-mounted paddle shifters is also on the agenda. The RL is so loaded up with equipment, in fact, there are no options. Climate control - the kind that helps to tame the elements outside the car - is under the direction of a unique all-wheel-drive setup that puts 70 per cent of the power to the front wheels during normal driving. Push the RL a bit and the balance shifts to the rear. When cornering, the system can even send up to 100 per cent of the available rear torque to the outside wheel. According to Acura, "overdriving" the outer wheel dramatically improves cornering stability. Visual help is provided by headlamps that swivel up to 20 degrees to the follow the RL's path.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 AUDI TT

Since the beginning, the two-seat TT coupe and roadster always had the looks and last year finally got the power to keep the wolves at bay. Wolves? At the TT's introduction, the top-of-the-line 225-horsepower turbo four-cylinder was all that was needed to take a place on the podium. Now, with bread-and-butter family sedans pushing 300 horsepower and the big performance machines broaching 400, 225 doesn't seem like a lot these days. So, an optional 250-horsepower 3.2-liter V6 was added to lineup last year that joined the base 180-horsepower turbocharged 1.8 as well as the 225-horse motor. The 3.2, which is mated to the Quattro all-wheel-drive system shows where Audi's heart is when it comes to the TT. With the base engine, a six-speed automatic transmission and front-wheel drive, it's a sporty little number, for sure. With the 250-horse V6/AWD/six-speed paddle-shifted manual (without a clutch), it's more than just "sporty," it's a driving machine. The new model gets a larger rear spoiler and other distinctive exterior bits, bigger brakes, and a modified exhaust. Xenon headlamps are standard across the line. Beyond this, it's a stand-pat year for one of our most favorite coupes... or roadsters. Speaking of which, the latter offers a manual folding top (with heated glass window), tonneau cover and dual polished aluminum rollbars as its signature.

...2005 BMW 6 SERIES

Yes, it has been a long wait (the 6-Series disappeared about 15 years ago) but based on first impressions of the 645Ci, BMW has totally redeemed itself. Visually, the new 6 Series more than does justice to the 6/6 branded coupes of old. It's also available in a gorgeous four-place convertible, a first for this series. In true BMW fashion, the bulging wheel openings are barely able to contain the car's 18-inch multi-spoke wheels matched with 45-series run-flat sneakers that eliminate the need to carry a spare. The interior brims with typical BMW attention to detail, including beautifully trimmed leather seats and, of course, every power-operated control you can think of. Also featured is the latest version of iDrive, BMW's single rotary control knob that works in tandem with a video screen to display and operate a variety of on-board systems, including stereo, climate control and navigation. Stability and traction control are part of the standard suspension package as is Active Roll Stabilization, which reduces body lean during cornering. The sole powerplant is a 325-horsepower 4.4-liter double-overhead-cam V8. There might be one engine, but customers can pick from three different transmissions: a traditional six-speed manual; a six-speed paddle-shifted sequential manual that works without a clutch pedal; or a six-speed automatic with a manual-shift mode. Options are limited to a head-up display that projects speed and other vital information onto the windshield, wood interior trim (dark or light birch), premium surround-sound system and heated front seats and steering wheel.

Base price: $70,600
Type: Two-door coupe/convertible
Base engine (hp): 4.4-liter DOHC V8 (325)

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 BMW Z4 ROADSTER

The Z4's look is straight from a modern-art museum with sharp, tight creases and angles everywhere. In fact, there's really nothing that outwardly indicates that the Z4 is any type of BMW, except perhaps for the double-oval grille highlighted by vertical chrome bars. Then there are the engines: a 184-horsepower 2.5-liter inline six-cylinder; and an optional 225-horsepower 3.0-liter straight-six that's lifted from the 3 Series coupes and sedans. A five-speed manual transmission, five-speed automatic with a manual-shift mode, a six-speed manual or clutchless sequential six-speed back up all that goodness, but what you get depends on what engine winds up under the hood. The optional power top folds up or down in a mere 10 seconds and an integrated tonneau eliminates the need for a snap-on boot. As usual - and thankfully - BMW runs amuck with leading-edge safety features including rollover protection. In case you were wondering, there's still no confirmation of a high-powered, sticks-to-asphalt-like glue M-Roadster to replace the sorely missed 2002 model.

Base price: $35,000
Type: Two-door roadster

Optional engine (hp): 3.0-liter DOHC I6 (225)

...2005 BUICK LACROSSE

The big news at Buick for 2005 is the arrival of a totally new four-door sedan to replace both the Century and Regal models. The LaCrosse will be built in the same Canadian plant as both the outgoing models. Available by October, the LaCrosse is new from road to roof and comes in five- and six-passenger configurations. While 3.5 inches shorter overall and riding on a slightly shorter wheelbase than the Century/Regal, the LaCrosse offers more interior and cargo space and is about 150-pounds lighter. Beneath the hood of the base CX and mid-level CXL is a carry-over 200-horsepower 3.8-liter V6. A new 240-horsepower 3.6-liter V6 with dual overhead camshafts and variable valve timing is standard on the top-of-the-line CSX. In either case, the transmission will have four forward gears that send power to the front wheels (16-inches on the CS and CXL and 17-inches on the CSX). Extensive attention has gone into ensuring a high level of refinement for this newcomer. Simply put, there's less noise, vibration and harshness. GM also assures greater attention to interior detail, fit and finish. Comfort and interior silence are also promised attributes, but the engineers took advantage of the all-new chassis to provide more agile handling than Century and Regal could muster.

Base price: $22,500 (est.)
Type: Four-door sedan
Base engine (hp): 3.8-liter OHV V6 (200)
Optional engine (hp): 3.6-liter DOHC V6 (240)

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 BUICK TERRAZA

Buick refers to its new premium TerraZa minivan - the first ever Buick minivan, by the way - as a "sport van" in an attempt to shed the soccer-mom stigma attached to this extremely practical and useful category of vehicle. As such, the TerraZa has obvious sport-utility styling cues. The TerraZa is actually an iteration of the new Chevy Uplander/Pontiac Montana SV6/Saturn Relay and is powered by a 200-horse V6 that displaces 3.5 liters. Exclusive to the TerraZa is an independent rear suspension featuring automatic load leveling. An available on-demand all-wheel-drive system gives TerraZa an edge against Mother Nature's tantrums. The standard configuration provides seating for seven people with buckets in the first and second rows and a three-person 50/50 split bench in back. If you need more cargo space, both the second and third rows can be folded away or removed. Interior versatility is further enhanced by a new overhead rail system designed to accept a variety of snap-in storage bins and accessory options, including a "PilotMoos" entertainment system that depends on a 40-gigabyte computer hard drive to store thousands of songs and numerous movies. It's one of the first systems that allows direct transfer of those files from your home PC. TerraZa acquires the usual Buick CX and CXL trim nomenclature. Standard equipment includes 17-inch wheels, rear air conditioning, a DVD entertainment system and a 3,500-lb. tow rating.

...2005 CHEVROLET COBALT

The Cobalt, arriving in two-door coupe and four-door sedan body styles, is based on GM's global (shared) Delta architecture and is positioned by Chevrolet as a premium compact with an extensive standard equipment list and higher level of interior refinement than the competition. The Cobalt is slightly smaller, both inside and out, than the Cavalier and rides on a one-inch shorter wheelbase, but offers more cargo capacity. The Cobalt picks up the usual Chevrolet LS and LT designations as well as a hot-rod SS Supercharged trim level. Base models arrive with air conditioning, CD audio system, tilt wheel and a split rear seat. All other models add anti-lock brakes, remote keyless entry, speed control and power windows and mirrors. In terms of powertrain, all base and LS models come with the 140-horsepower 2.2-liter Ecotec four-cylinder coupled to a five-speed manual transmission or an optional four-speed automatic. The LT sedan (the only model to receive the designation) comes with an automatic transmission and is expected to be the volume leader. Designed for the young tuner crowd, the SS Supercharged coupe is blessed with - you guessed it - a supercharged 2.0-liter Ecotec that boasts 205 ponies. A Cobalt SS, non-supercharged, will arrive sometime in 2005 as an '06 model with a 2.4-liter engine. Several wheel-tire packages are available - from 15-18-inch diameters - all with unique designs. As an up-level compact, you can option your Cobalt with heated leather seats, power sunroof, XM Satellite radio with MP3 player.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 CHEVROLET CORVETTE

The freshly shaped sixth-generation Corvette (C6) boasts refinement and an updated engine beneath its smooth new coupe and convertible body styles. The new Corvette is five inches shorter and an inch narrower than the outgoing model. Dramatic fender flares top the larger 18-inch wheels and the first exposed head lights on a Corvette since 1962 help present a totally new face. The interior has also been completely made over. GM says extensive engineering and design work went into the new Vette with plenty of attention to adding refinement without sacrificing any of the legendary performance the plastic sports car is famous for. In fact, the Corvette engineering team says the C6 is more competition-influenced than any previous version with more raw performance, yet improved road manners. The 2005 Corvette comes with a new standard LS2 V8 displacing an even 6.0 liters and sending 400 horsepower to the rear wheels through a four-speed automatic transmission or optional six-speed Tremec manual gearbox. That's a hefty 50-horsepower increase over the C5's 5.7-liter engine. The brakes have also been upgraded and there are three suspension packages available that range from comfortable cruiser to race-track ready. The mid-level unit boasts Delco's award-winning Magnetic Ride Selective Ride Control that uses electronics and magnets to instantly change shock settings. Anti-lock brakes, traction control and stability control are all standard as are run-flat tires, keyless access-start and an AM/FM/CD/MP3 audio system. New options for the C6 include DVD-based navigation and dual-mode head-up display. The new Corvette actually offers improved ride qualities and even stickier handling thanks to a longer wheelbase and stiffer chassis.

Base price: $43,800

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 CHEVROLET EQUINOX

Out with the old and in with the new. The Tracker and the four-door Blazer are gone, and the Equinox has arrived for 2005 as the entry-level Chevrolet sport-utility vehicle. Even with an extensive array of standard equipment, including a 185-horsepower V6, five-speed automatic transmission, air conditioning, power locks, windows and mirrors, height-adjustable driver's seat and 16-inch wheels, the Equinox is priced below even the least-expensive Blazer. Finally, a small Chevy sport ute that will give Honda and Toyota a run for their money. To do so, the Equinox features a 60/40 split rear seat that slides fore and aft through a range of eight inches, allowing you to choose between more leg room or cargo space, depending on what's needed at the time. Other innovations include an electric power steering system and a rear cargo compartment cover that's carpeted on one side and has a washable plastic surface on the other so you can choose between appearance and ruggedness. The tray also fits into a trio of slots set at different heights so it can be used as a picnic table, work station or for multi-level storage. The front passenger seatback also folds flat, just in case you need to transport long building materials or a stepladder. The Equinox is a front driver unless equipped with the on-demand, all-wheel-drive system that diverts some power to the rear when slippage is detected. Primarily an on-road system, this slip-and-grip setup still allows off-road mobility to get you home when the going gets rough.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 CHEVROLET UPLANDER

Not only does the 2005 Uplander replace the Venture minivan, it adds a strong dose of sport-utility-vehicle look to what is probably the most practical class of vehicle on the road. Perhaps most importantly, the Uplander screams, "I am not a soccer mom." Without that stigma previously dangling from the Uplander's neck, buyers can just focus on what this multi-purpose vehicle - and its Pontiac, Buick and Saturn siblings - have to offer. The new minivan is available in base, LS and LT trim levels in either front or all-wheel-drive variants. A commercial cargo van will also be available. Power comes from a 200-horse 3.5-liter V6 mated to a four-speed automatic transmission. As new as it is, the Uplander is obviously related to the outgoing Venture and shares many of the same styling cues. The interior is similarly familiar with seating for seven passengers across three rows. Both the second- and third-row seats can be stowed or removed for additional cargo capacity. As well, there are some new and innovative storage solutions including an overhead rail system with snap-in bins and accessory modules. As for entertainment, the Uplander offers "Mobile Digital media powered by RealVox", a system that's capable of storing up to 10,000 songs and numerous movies on its 40-gigabyte hard drive. Standard equipment includes air conditioning, power windows and locks, tilt steering, CD stereo with MP3 computer file playback capability, four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock and 17-inch wheels. As with the Venture, the Uplander is also available with a variety of mobility options for people who need help entering and exiting the vehicle.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 CHRYSLER 300

Making big waves in the DaimlerChrysler camp is the all-new 300, a full-size four-door sedan that, in one bold move, replaces the long-standing front-drive, "cab-forward" Concord, 300M and Dodge Intrepid. The new 300, available in rear- and all-wheel drive, offers substantial interior room because of its tall roof and long wheelbase. The new sedan comes in four models - 300, 300 Touring, 300 Limited and 300C - the top three of which can be upgraded with all-wheel drive. Engines run the gamut from a 190-horsepower 2.7-liter V6 and 250-hp 3.5-liter V6, to a 5.7-liter 340-horse "Hemi" V8 (dubbed the 300C) that makes this into a fun family car with plenty of kick. Hardly considered a fuel miser, the Hemi does, however, have the ability to seamlessly shut down (and re-fire) four of its eight cylinders during light-load conditions. It's a trick that conserves about 20 per cent of the 300C's precious fuel cargo. Both V6s connect through four-speed automatic transmissions. When AWD or the Hemi is specified, the transmission gains an extra gear and the AutoStick shift-for-yourself function. All models arrive well stocked with air conditioning, eight-way power driver's seat, tilt and telescoping steering column and 17-inch wheels. Up-level models add traction control, stability control, leather seats and climate control, to name just a few. The 300 also received a U.S. Government five-star frontal-crash rating, the highest rating given.

NEW FOR 2005!

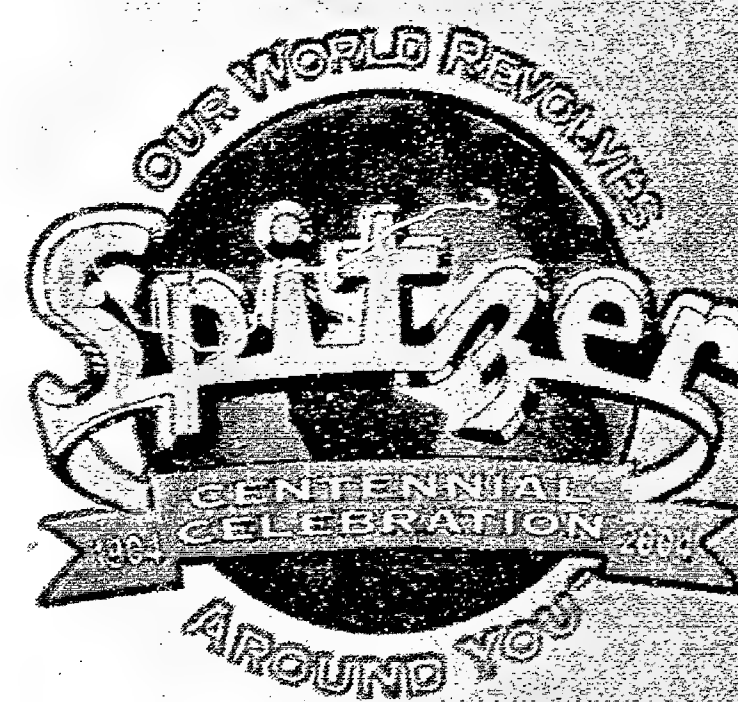

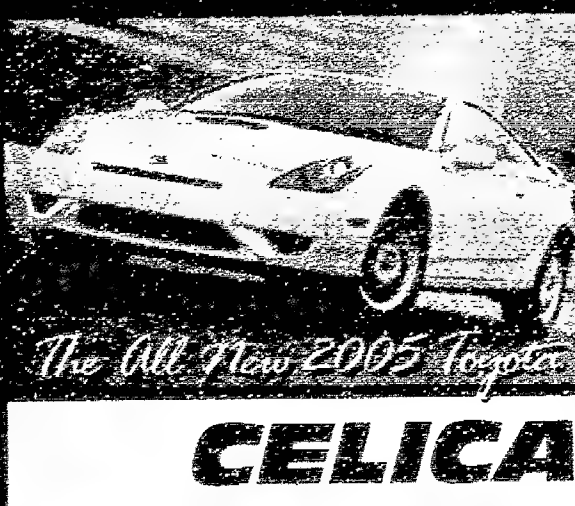

...2005 CHRYSLER CROSSFIRE

One of the first and most tangible offspring of the Mercedes/Chrysler marriage is the Crossfire. The sleek little two-seater is based on the last-generation Mercedes SLK sports car and also uses the baby Merc's 215-horsepower V6 engine, transmission and suspension. Put the two side by side and you'd never believe it, though, since the styling is completely and utterly unique to each. For 2005, Chrysler has spiced up the Crossfire line with the addition of a roadster model as well as high-performance variants wearing the in-house SRT (Street and Racing Technology) label. The Crossfire is available in base, Limited and SRT-6 trim levels all in either coupe or convertible. The stunning exterior is echoed inside with a wide center console that connects a prominent feature line from the hood through to the tail where a spoiler automatically raises and lowers based on speed. The SRT-6 models come with a hand-built, 330-horsepower supercharged 3.2 A six-speed manual transmission is standard and a five-speed automatic optional in naturally aspirated models. The SRT-6 versions get an upgraded high-torque automatic. In all cases, Crossfire has enormous brakes and a mix of 18- and 19-inch wheels (unique alloys for the SRT-6). Standard equipment includes air conditioning, stability control, power windows and locks, dual-zone climate control and anti-lock brakes.

...2005 DODGE CARAVAN

With the experience of 20 years and 10 million units, Dodge knows what minivan buyers want and has put those lessons to good use. The result of a $400-million investment, the 2005 Caravan and Grand Caravan appear little changed, but are, in fact, all new. Both short- (Caravan) and long-wheelbase (Grand Caravan) models are available in SE and SXT trim levels. The Grand Caravan also comes in an SE Plus version. Utility is the name of the game and the big news on that front is the Stow 'N Go seat arrangement that allows both second- and third-row seats in the Grand Caravan to flip and fold completely flat into the floor for unobstructed cargo space. When the seats are in their upright and locked position, the area beneath the floor becomes available for covered storage. Extensive use of "quiet steel" and liquid sound dampener helps silence the new models. Dodge engineers also took advantage of the redesign to offer inflatable knee blockers and three-row side-curtain airbags for additional occupant protection. Because the space beneath the floor is needed for seat storage, all-wheel drive is no longer available. The base Caravan SE comes with a 150-horsepower four-cylinder engine but all other models receive a 180-horsepower 3.3-liter V6, except the Grand Caravan SXT, which gets a 207-horsepower (nee 215) 3.8-liter V6. A four-speed automatic is used across the line.

Base price: $19,000 Caravan, $21,700 Grand Caravan.
Type: Four-door minivan.
Base engine (hp): 2.4-liter DOHC I4 (150). Caravan; 3.3-liter OHV V6 (180). Grand Caravan.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 DODGE MAGNUM

The big front-drive Intrepid sedan is out and the much bigger rear-drive Magnum wagon is in as Dodge's mainstay for family transportation. That means if you want a Dodge sedan, you'll be piloting a smaller Stratus or converting your allegiance to Chrysler and picking up a new (and closely related) 300. It's a surprising about-face for a company that has, for years, sold us the virtues of "cab forward" and front-wheel-drive. However, Dodge's new wagon has to be considered a treat since we haven't seen anything this radical from this division since the Viper's introduction way back when. Space is the Magnum's claim to fame (with the minivan-like liftgate up, it can swallow a 27-inch TV), as is its rear-drive platform that can also be upgraded with all-wheel drive. Add a 340-horsepower 5.7-liter Hemi V8 to the mix and you've got one of the fastest and quickest grocery-getting wagons on the planet. In fact, the Dodge Boys are quick to point to a 0-60-m.p.h. time that's close to six-seconds flat. To save fuel, the Hemi deactivates four cylinders when your foot is off the gas. With a 3,800-pound towing capacity, it can also haul a camper trailer or small watercraft. If the hot-rod RT model is a little out of your league, you can always opt for a Magnum with a 2.7-, or 3.5-liter V6 with horsepower ratings of 190 and 250, respectively. Even in base trim, the Magnum comes with most modern conveniences, while anti-lock brakes and traction control are standard only on mid- and up-level models. V6-equipped vehicles come with a four-speed automatic transmission, while a five-speed unit is optional on the 3.5 and standard on the RT.

Base price: $23,000.
Type: Four-door wagon.
Base engine (hp): 2.7-liter DOHC V6 (190); 5.7-liter OHV V8 (340).
Optional engines (hp): 3.5-liter SOHC V6 (250); 6.0-liter OHV V8 (325).
Layout: Front-engine, rear/all-wheel drive.
Transmission: 4-spd auto; 5-spd auto (opt.).
Mileage (city/hwy): 17/25 (3.5, RWD).
Safety: Front, side-impact & side-curtain airbags (opt.); ABS (opt.); traction control (opt.); stability control (opt.).

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 DODGE DAKOTA

It has been a long time coming, but with the introduction of the GM Colorado/Canyon twins last year, the arrival of the mid-size 2005 Dakota couldn't have been planned any better by Dodge. It's "bigger, bolder and tougher", points that are tough to argue. All models ride on a longer wheelbase as well as a new independent front suspension in extended Club Cab and four-door Quad Cab formats. There's no regular-cab Dakota. For that, you'll be shopping for a full-sized Ram. Both Quad and Club cab models are available in SL, SLT and Laramie trim. The standard powerplant is a 3.7-liter V6 sending 210 horsepower to the rear wheels through a six-speed manual gearbox or an optional four-speed automatic. A 230-horsepower 4.7-liter V8 is available on all models and is also backed by a six-speed manual or an optional five-speed automatic. Later in the model year, a stronger version of the 4.7 will be available on SLT and Laramie models with an expected 250-plus horsepower. A part-time four-wheel-drive system is available on all three trim levels while SLT and Laramie models with the V8 and automatic transmission can be had with a full-time system. The new Dak is nearly four inches longer than its predecessor, with the majority of the extra length found ahead of the front axle for improved crash protection.

Base price: $22,900.
Type: Four-door pickup.
Base engine (hp): 3.7-liter SOHC V6 (210).
Optional engine (hp): 4.7-liter SOHC V8 (230).
Layout: Front-engine, rear four-wheel drive.
Transmission: Six-speed manual; four-speed automatic (opt. on 3.7); five-speed automatic (opt. on 4.7).
Mileage (city/hwy): 14/19 (4.7, 4x4, AT).
Safety: Front airbags; side-curtain airbags (opt.); rear ABS; traction control (opt.).

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 FORD F-SERIES SUPER DUTY

Following the release of the new F150 pickup last year are the new-for-2005 F-Series Super Duty 1/2-, 3/4-, and one-ton trucks that have more power, capacity and towing ability wrapped up in purposeful new skin. In fact, Ford touts many best-in-class honors for its new SD line. Certainly the new frame made from thicker steel has a lot to do with that. There's also a coil-sprung front suspension for improved ride, a tighter turning circle and the ability to tow up to 17,000 pounds (with a fifth wheel). In fact, since 90 per cent of all Super Duty trucks are used for towing, Ford offers its TowCommand System, a package that incorporates a factory-installed electronic trailer-brake controller that's coordinated with the truck's own brakes. Also part of the package are special towing mirrors, a tow-haul-mode transmission and upgraded brakes. Of course, you need power to tow. The three-valve-per-cylinder head layout introduced last year in the F150 is now available on the V10, helping the 6.8-liter unit produce 362 horsepower and 457 lb.-ft. of torque. The 6.0-liter turbo-diesel makes 225 horsepower and belts out a whopping 570 lb.-ft. of torque. The base engine is a 300-horsepower 5.4-liter V8 (up 40 ponies over last year). All can be matched to your choice of a six-speed manual transmission or a five-speed automatic (different gearing for the diesel) and two- or four-wheel drive. The new SD pickups are available in XL, XLT, Lariat and Harley-Davidson trim levels and in regular, extended SuperCab and four-door Crew Cab models and with 6.75- or eight-foot boxes.

Base price: $22,400.
Type: Two-door heavy-duty pickup.
Base engine (hp): 3.4-liter SOHC V8 (300).
Optional engines (hp): 6.8-liter SOHC V10 (362); 6.0-liter OHV V8, turbo-diesel (325).

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 FORD GT

The Corvette and Viper finally have the company of a high-end performance Ford with as much or more racing mystique (and base price) as the other two combined. The new GT, a modern-day throwback to Ford's GT40, an all-out effort to beat Ferrari on the international racing scene (heh, the French 24 Hours of LeMans road race), is priced at more than double the most expensive Corvette and more than $40,000 above the Viper. Your $139,000 buys at least the look of the classic deceased GT40, but power comes from a heavily massaged supercharged 550-horsepower 5.4-liter DOHC V8. While perhaps not as exotic as the Viper's V10, the forced-fed Ford engine is blatantly visible through the GT's trick rear window. That's right, the engine is in the back, right behind the driver's ear. Where the GT really excels is chassis and body construction. Some of the top minds in racing development, from legendary Carroll "Cobra" Shelby and S7 supercar builder Steve Saleen, to NASCAR team owner Jack Roush and hot-shot Ford designer J. Mays (as well as many others) were all involved. With an aluminum body and chassis and mix of 18- and 19-inch rubber, the GT still weighs in at close to 3,500 pounds. Practically is not the GT's strong suit (as denoted by the paltry 1.6-cubic feet of tackle-box space). Rather, with a 205-plus-m.p.h. top speed, it's meant for much more than any public road was ever intended. In case you want to know how it drives, just ask comedian/TV celeb Jay Leno, who recently took delivery of one of the first units.

Base price: $139,000
Type: Two-door, mid-engine coupe
Base engine (hp): 5.4-liter DOHC V8, supercharged (550)
Optional engine: None
Layout: Mid-engine, rear-wheel drive

...2005 FORD MUSTANG

History is about to repeat itself. As was the case 40 years ago, Ford has a brand-new Mustang for 2005 and a wide-open playing field without a competitor in sight. Still rear drive and powered by a V6 or V8, this iconic Ford has been thoroughly redesigned with lots of reminders of the past mixed with lots of new stuff. Not only does the new Mustang pay tribute to the past with its exterior styling cues, but the interior, right down to the gauges, smacks of the mid-1960s. The best improvement might just be in the wheelbase, which grows by six inches compared to that of the '04 Mustang. According to Ford, this yields improved stance, balance and increased interior space. Although equipped with an old-school solid rear axle, Ford claims the new Mustang delivers a vastly superior combination of ride and handling. The base 4.0-liter V6 pumps out a healthy 210 horses, 23 more than before, while the optional 300-horsepower 4.6-liter aluminum V8 makes 40 more ponies than the '04 V8, which is also 75 pounds heavier. Both are backed by five-speed manual transmissions or optional five-speed automatics. Standard features include power windows and locks, remote keyless entry, four-wheel disc brakes and air conditioning. The new Mustang owes its whoa to 12.4-inch front brake rotors on G1 models while V6 versions get 11.4-inchers. Standard wheels are 16 inches in diameter while V8 models get 17-inchers. From the very front we think of that first category comes a color-configurable instrument panel that allows the owner to mix and match the lighting from a choice of 125 backgrounds.

Base price: $19,400
Type: Two-door coupe/convertible (late arrival)
Base engine (hp): 4.0-liter OHV V6 (210)
Optional engine (hp): 4.6-liter DOHC V8 (300)

...2005 GMC CANYON

The Canyon replaced the aging Sonoma last year as the compact pickup in the GMC camp. Bigger, more powerful and available in a lot more varieties, it has been a hit from the get-go. Changes for 2005 include the availability of a leather interior package with cloth door inserts when the extended-cab model is specified, a sunroof, MP3 computer file capability with the sound system, box side steps on regular- and extended-cab models, and traction control with a locking differential on two-wheel-drive versions. Otherwise, the Chevrolet Colorado's twin continues to be much the same with a wide variety of cab styles (regular, extended and crew), box sizes (five-foot and six-foot), drive systems (rear or 4x4), suspension setups (heavy-duty and off-road) and engines (four and five cylinders). Both engines are based on the in-line six introduced in the Envoy. The 2.8-liter four-cylinder produces 175 horsepower, while the in-line five-cylinder makes 220 horses from its 3.5 liters. Connected to either is a choice of a five-speed manual transmission, or optional four-speed automatic originally designed for the full-size Sierra pickup. Also optional is GMC's dash-operated shift-on-the-fly four-wheel-drive system.

Base price: $15,000
Type: Four-door compact pickup
Base engine (hp): 2.8-liter DOHC I4 (175)

...2005 HUMMER H2/H2 SUT

Compared to the military-derived H1, the H2 represents a more practical and cost-effective approach to Hummer ownership. You still get the chunky Hummer look and much of the off-road capability (probably more than you'll ever need) in a smaller package that's easier to drive, park and pay for. For 2005 the H2 comes in the same four-door wagon-type body style, but is also available in an SUV pickup-truck model. On its own, the box doesn't offer much storage, but the SUV comes with GM's Midgate system. Just power down the back window, fold the rear seat forward and drop down the Midgate wall to get you a healthy 4x6-foot load floor. With the Midgate up and back in place, the truck can still carry five people, while the regular H2 can hold six with the optional single-person third-row seat (the rest of the space is consumed by the full-size spare tire). With the Suburban's 325-horsepower 6.0-liter V8, an independent suspension and full-time four-wheel-drive, the H2 is one tough truck. Despite this, it can be equipped with as much luxury/utility as anything else in the GM truck lineup. Leather upholstery is standard and a Delphi DVD navigation system optional, although there probably won't be any mapping for many of the off-road locales this brute will take you to. Changes for 2005 include a couple of new color choices and an optional luxury interior.

Base price: $51,000 (H2), $52,000 (H2 SUT)
Type: Four-door sport utility
Base engine (hp): 6.0-liter OHV V8 (325)
Optional engine: None
Layout: Front engine, four-wheel drive
Transmission: Four-speed automatic
Mileage (city/hwy): N/A
Safety: Front air bags; ABS; OnStar GPS tracking

...2005 HONDA ODYSSEY

More space, more power and more safety features form the foundation of the new 2005 Honda Odyssey. Actually, an all-new, front-to-ground-up chassis forms the foundation and provides one-inch more overall width and two inches more overall length than what you'd find in last year's model. That directly translates into more legroom for passengers riding in the standard third-row seat. Side-impact and side-curtain airbags with rollover sensor, stability traction control, anti-lock brakes are also part of the package as is air conditioning and power everything. The four models - LX, EX, EX-L with leather and Touring - build on that. The top-of-the-line Touring has absolutely everything, except an Acura badge. You'll get power-adjustable pedals, tri-zone climate control (driver, passenger and rear zones), front and rear park-assist sensors and run-flat tires. The 3.5-liter V6 makes a return this year and puts 255 horsepower (up 15) to the front wheels through a five-speed automatic transmission. Displacement on demand, a system that shuts down three cylinders while under light throttle/no-throttle conditions, is optional. Atypical minivan touches include a dash-located shifter and a nine-inch cinema screen (the norm is seven) when the optional DVD surround-sound entertainment system is specified. Of course, there's a myriad of storage compartments that appear when the seats aren't folded into the floor to make a perfectly flat load surface. Seating configurations include two second-row captain's chairs that can be individually moved fore and aft, or locked together to form one big seat. An optional single seat can be slid between to hold an extra person and then folded into the floor when not in use.

Base price: $24,500
Type: Four-door minivan
Base engine (hp): 3.5-liter SOHC V6 (255)
Layout: Front-engine, front-wheel drive
Transmission: Five-speed automatic
Mileage (city/hwy): 19/25
Safety: Front airbags; side-impact airbags; ABS; traction control
Weight (lb.): 4,380

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 HYUNDAI TUCSON

If the sport-utility category was a restaurant, the reply to any newcomer would be, "sorry, we're all booked up". But Hyundai, not one for playing by the rule book, has found a way in the back door. The popular Santa Fe has had to contend with a seemingly endless list of competitors, the likes of which includes the Jeep Liberty, Ford Escape and Honda CR-V. In response, Hyundai has undercut the entire category with the new-for-2005 Tucson that's based on the compact Elantra sedan platform. Smaller than a Santa Fe, the Tucson is big on standard convenience and safety features. You'll get side-impact airbags (for a total of six), four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, stability and traction control, air conditioning, power windows/locks/mirrors and remote keyless entry with alarm. That's in addition to heated outside mirrors, heated wiper rests and a six-speaker CD stereo. From there, you pick from one of the GLS, SLS and LX trim levels, which largely dictate whether you'll get a 2.0-liter four-cylinder engine (GLS) or 2.7-liter V6 (GLS and LX). Both can be ordered as front-wheel or with an all-wheel-drive system that directs all of the power (50 per cent, actually) to the front wheels with the ability to move it to the back wheels in varying amounts depending on how bad the driving surface really is. With 10 years of powertrain warranty, the new five-passenger Tucson is a compelling all-weather alternative to both compact sedans and sport-utility vehicles.

Base price: $17,500

...2005 INFINITI G35

This year, Infiniti has seemingly done the impossible by injecting as much as 38 more horsepower into the G35 coupe and sedan models. The catch? You have to specify a six-speed manual transmission to get it. Still, five-speed-automatic-equipped versions will have a 280-horsepower version of the 3.5-liter V6, which is up 20. At 298 ponies, the six-speed-manual G35s are better equipped to take on their BMW, Acura, Audi and Mercedes-Benz rivals. The G35 is driven by the rear wheels unless you select an all-wheel drive sedan (called the G35x). For 2005, sedan models receive a mild restyling with new hoods, bumpers, trunk lids and headlights. If you think you've seen the two-door before, you're right - sort of - since the its body lines closely follow those of the Nissan 350Z. The only real difference is that the Infiniti has a longer wheelbase (to house a back seat) and it has dialed in some extra content and softened the ride. All G35s come with the usual air/cruise/tilt and power amenities plus stability control, a six-disc CD changer and, of course, Infiniti's four-year/60,000-mile basic warranty. This year, the coupe can be ordered with a special sport-tuned suspension package that includes 19-inch wheels, drilled-aluminum pedals and a limited-slip differential. On the sedan models, the package includes 18-inch wheels.

...2005 JAGUAR X-TYPE

Although it's Jaguar's least-expensive model, the X-Type carries one standard item no other car (or its many competitors) has: all-wheel drive (Audi, BMW and Mercedes-Benz make AWD available as an extra-cost option). This confidence-inspiring feature splits the torque 40/60 front/rear under normal driving conditions, but shifts the power to the appropriate wheels when needed. Based on parent Ford's European Mondeo Platform, the X-Type comes with either a 192-horsepower 2.5-liter V6 or an optional 227-hp 3.0-liter V6. The new 2005 Sportswagon comes with the latter and adds a body kit, big wheels, lowered stance and a special interior. A new full-load VDP model joins the crew this year as does a Sport model that includes various body bits and a mesh grille, lowered stance and big wheels. Transmission choices consist of a five-speed manual or five-speed automatic (depending on the model). Despite its more diminutive size and lower price tag, the X-Type's standard feature list is long and includes Connolly leather hides covering the seats, birds-eye walnut-trimmed interior panels, power driver's seat and a tilt/telescoping steering wheel.

Base price: $31,000

...2005 JEEP GRAND CHEROKEE

Although the exterior dimensions are about the same as before, the wheels of the new 2005 Grand Cherokee have been moved farther out to create a roomier interior and improved ride. Jeep's top dog sport-utility vehicle moves more up-market for 2005 with a higher-quality look and feel, which should help justify it to those considering a top-of-the-line Liberty instead. While that model is certainly cute and capable, the Grand Cherokee's advantages are room and power, which outdo the Liberty by a wide margin. The Grand Cherokee keeps its familiar Laredo and Limited handles for 2005, but the base 4.0-liter inline six-cylinder has been replaced by the Liberty's 3.7-liter V6. A 325-horsepower version of the 5.7-liter OHV "Hemi" V8 replaces the old iron 5.9 at the top end. Aside from developing more power, it can shut down four cylinders under light driving for a reported fuel savings of 25 per cent. Lean on the gas and other four cylinders come back to life without you even knowing they were ever off. A 4.7-liter V8 is the only holdover from 2004 and is the next step up from the V6. All engines are backed by a five-speed automatic transmissions. Of course, the Grand Cherokee is just as rough and tumble as previous models and continues to be available with a variety of four-wheel-drive systems. New up-level options include SIRIUS Satellite radio, a rear-seat DVD entertainment system and audio help from Boston Acoustics.

Base price: $25,100 (2004)
Type: Four-door sport-utility vehicle
Base engine (hp): 3.7-liter SOHC V6 (210)
Optional engine (hp): 4.7-liter SOHC V8 (230);

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 LAND ROVER LR3

The remaining old-tech fugitive of the Land Rover line, the Discovery, is replaced for 2005 with a thoroughly modern LR3 that cherry-picks at least one significant piece of hardware from another Ford-owned company. A Jaguar-derived 300-horse 4.4-liter V8 powers a permanent four-wheel-drive system through a six-speed automatic transmission. With styling that mirrors the top-of-the-line Range Rover, the LR3 can seat up to seven passengers and comes with a two-speed transfer case for severe off-road duty. All LR3s are equipped with the Terrain Response System that consists of five different settings to match various driving conditions. Pick your mode, from dry pavement to severe off-road, and the system adjusts everything from the ride height of the electronically controlled suspension to the differential settings and the anti-lock brake and stability-control limits. For close to $30,000 less than the Range Rover, but with more power and of similar sizing, the new LR3 looks like a great place to dive into Land Rover ownership.

Base price: $45,000
Type: Four-door sport-utility vehicle
Base engine (hp): 4.4-liter DOHC V8 (300)
Optional engine: None
Layout: Front-engine, four-wheel drive
Transmission: Six-speed automatic

NEW FOR 2005!

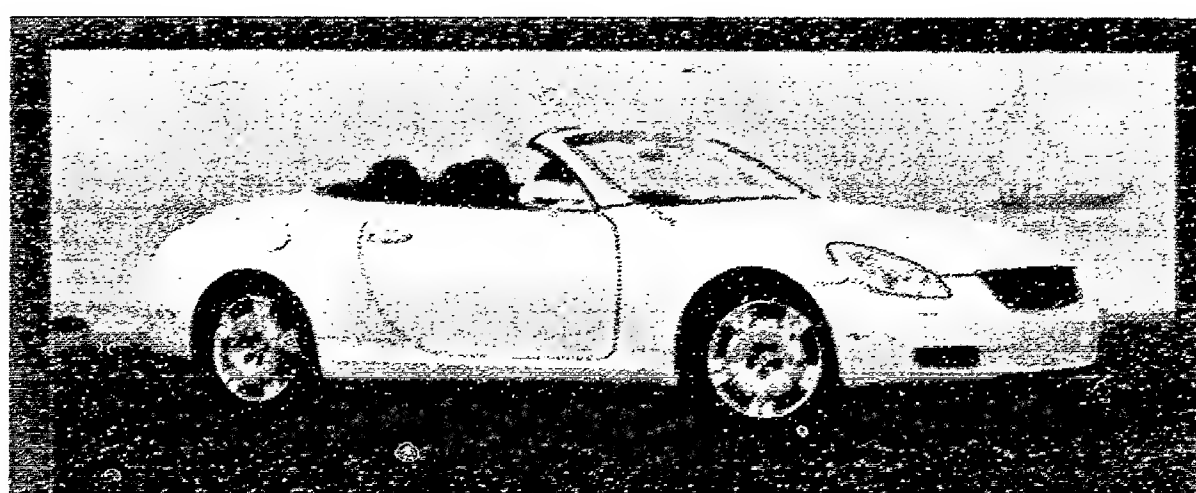

...2005 KIA SORENTO

The Sorento sport-utility vehicle is proof that Kia is working overtime to expand its line as well as its loyal, value-conscious fan base. Kia vehicles, which were once purchased almost solely on entry price, are actually being bought because they're fashionable... and because they still offer good value. The five-passenger Sorento, with its handsome body-on-frame design, is a case in point. From a features perspective, the starting-point LX is stocked with air conditioning, cruise control, power windows/locks/heated mirrors, eight-speaker CD stereo, eight-way adjustable driver's seat and side-impact airbags. The EX adds a luxury package that includes leather seats, 280-watt stereo and climate control, which turns this first-time ute into a solid first-class off-roader. No matter the model, you'll find a 192-horsepower 3.5-liter V6 engine under the hood. This year, however, the Sorento is available with a five-speed automatic transmission that replaces last year's four-speed automatic. There are also two different four-wheel-drive systems available (in addition to a base 4x2): a shift-on-the-fly part-time unit that's standard on base LX, and a Torque-On-Demand system in the well-equipped EX that automatically locks in when wheel slippage is detected. A two-speed transfer case (offering low range) is part of either package. The five-speed-manual-equipped LX Sorento can be ordered with a Sport package that includes blacked-out headlamps, new-for-2005 premium audio system, side step bars, alloy wheels, fog lights, keyless remote entry, roof rack and leather-wrapped steering wheel.

Base price: $19,000

...2005 LEXUS SC 430

One minute it's a four-seat coupe. The next, it's a convertible. How will you make up your mind? With only a few options available, whether you want to have the metal folding roof up or down is the only real decision you have to make when it comes to the Lexus SC 430. How much easier could life get? There's one engine (a 300-horsepower 4.3-liter DOHC V8 borrowed from the LS 430 sedan), one transmission (a five-speed automatic) and a list of standard equipment that's so long, the only features you can add are run-flat tires, a rear spoiler and Lexus Link, a satellite-based rolling help center. Among the plethora of luxury equipment is a climate-control system that automatically adjusts both airflow and temperature depending on whether the top is up or down, leather seats and a nine-speaker, 240-watt super-stereo designed by sound engineer/musician Mark Levinson. The rear-drive, steel-bodied SC 430 also has a standard navigation system with a touchscreen that, when not in use, can be covered up by an electronically controlled wooden door.

...2005 LINCOLN AVIATOR

Based on the platform used for the country's most popular sport-utility vehicle, the Ford Explorer, the Lincoln Aviator obviously has a reputable, not to mention secure, foundation. But since it wears a Lincoln badge, it takes an extended trip through the tailor's shop before hitting the streets loaded with luxury and 302-horsepower 4.6-liter V8 driving the rear or all four wheels. The Aviator comes in one model with four new option packages for 2005. Regardless, there's no shortage of standard equipment. The Aviator includes anti-lock brakes, running boards, power heated signal mirrors with memory and downward-tilting puddle lamps, remote keyless entry, dual-zone climate control, premium audio system and automatic headlamps. That's in addition to power locks and windows, power adjustable pedals, power lumbar support, leather interior trim and Ford's "safety canopy" system that protects in the event of side impact or rollover. Electronic stability control is standard on all models as are 17-inch, seven-spoke machined-aluminum wheels. Interior luxury is top-of-mind with satin nickel accents, wood trim, premium leather and white light-emitting diode (LED) instrument lighting. Like all Lincolns, the Aviator comes with free maintenance for the first year or 12,000 miles. Other changes for 2005 are limited to a new grille and color choices. Good looking and hard working, the Aviator comes with three rows of seats to accommodate up to seven people.

...2005 MAZDA RX-8

The RX-8 picks up where the RX-7 left off in 1995 by providing the kind of high-revving power that never fails to impress. The more practical design for the RX-8 uses two full-size doors plus two rear-hinged mini-ports that provide access to two rear bucket seats that are separated by a full-length floor console. Niceties include well-bolstered front buckets, tri-oval gauge cluster with a digital speed readout and a thickly padded race-car-style steering wheel. Under the hood lives a 1.3-liter twin-rotor Wankel engine that's small, light and nestled well behind the front wheels to help provide close to 50/50 front/rear weight distribution for optimum handling. In its most potent form, the six-speed-manual-gearbox-equipped RX-8 develops 238 horsepower and 159 lb.-ft. of torque. A 197-horsepower version comes on models fitted with the paddle-shifted four-speed automatic transmission. Mazda has seen fit to deck out the RX-8 with air conditioning, cruise control, four-wheel anti-lock disc brakes, six-speaker audio system with CD player, power windows, locks and mirrors. Also standard are front and seat-mounted airbags plus side-curtain airbags. In addition, three separate content packages - Sport, Touring and Grand Touring - allow buyers to load up their rotary steeds with xenon headlights, stability and traction control, heated seats, leather-trimmed interior, power moonroof, navigation system, 18-inch wheels, sport suspension and a premium audio system.

...2005 MAZDA3

Building on the success of the roomy Protégé runabout, Mazda has taken technology and design to the next level with the Mazda3. Let's face it, the Protégé was a tough act to follow, but the Mazda3 kicked it up a notch. That meant an all-new, more rigid platform and new suspension and chassis components driven by the front wheels with a standard 148-horsepower (144 in California) 2.0-liter four-cylinder engine or optional 160-horsepower 2.3-liter four-cylinder. That also meant mandatory four-wheel disc brakes, electric power steering and optional head-curtain airbags, rain-sensing wipers and stability control. The result is function and style that is anything but entry level. The familial similarities to the larger Mazda6 are obvious, especially from the front, with a touch of RX-8 thrown in for good measure. The Mazda3 is available in four-door sedan and four-door wagon body styles that outpace the old Protégé in all key dimensions. Along with the sporty looks and new standard amenities, comes a sporty new attitude. No matter the engine, you can tack on an appearance package that includes ground effects and spoilers.

Base price: $13,700 (sedn); $17,100 (wgn)

...2005 MERCEDES-BENZ SLK-CLASS

For European-sports-car fanatics on a budget, the latest SLK is a wish-list dream come true. Slicker and quicker than the original, this baby Mercedes-Benz has also been updated and refined in just about every way possible. Despite a slightly longer, wider and taller silhouette and a more muscular front end, the car's stubby profile is reminiscent of the previous model. However, under the spiky new sheetmetal, the platform has been considerably stiffened to improve ride and handling. The suspension and steering components have been similarly upgraded. Plenty of shiny metal trim pieces have been applied to the gauges and control switches and one of a half-dozen shades of standard leather trim are yours for the asking. Of the more unique available features is a three-speed fan (called AIRSCARF) that blows warm air through the head-restraint vents in each seat. When the time comes to protect yourself from the elements, a push of a switch - and about 22 seconds - is all it takes to convert the SLK to a hardtop coupe from a roadster. The folding metal roof has also been reengineered to leave more luggage room when it's down and hidden away. An all-new base 268-horsepower 3.5-liter V6 offers 53 more ponies than '04's optional 3.2-liter V6 (a four-cylinder was standard last year). Transmission choices consist of a six-speed manual, or optional seven-speed automatic. Look for an SLK55 AMG model with a 362-horsepower 5.4-liter V8 down the road.

...2005 MERCURY MARINER

If you became lost on a desert island in the spring and then magically stumbled across a Mercury dealership this fall, you would probably be stunned by the number of new vehicles there. In addition to the Montego sedan, there's a new version of the Ford Escape that's all dressed up and wearing the Mariner label. Finally, Mercury dealers have an entry-level sport-utility vehicle to help bring in the younger buyers it desires. Although Escape based, designers have ensured the Mariner at least looks like a Mercury. Both the front end and the instrument panel share a familial resemblance with the bigger Mountaineer (based on the Ford Explorer). The Mariner can be equipped with four- or six-cylinder power and with front- or all-wheel-drive. In all cases, the transmission is a four-speed automatic. To ensure the Mariner receives its proper recognition as a somewhat up-level machine, the standard-equipment list, even on base models, includes four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, 16-inch aluminum wheels, power windows, mirrors and locks, keyless entry with driver's-side keypad, air conditioning and a leather-wrapped steering wheel. Three trim levels - Convenience, Luxury and Premier - ensure tailoring of the Mariner to your specific needs and budget. The Premier gets 16-inch machined-face wheels, audiophile sound system with subwoofer and power-heated and leather-trimmed seats with "Preferred Seede" inserts.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 MERCURY MONTEGO

The new Montego is a distinct departure for Mercury, in fact for any domestic sedan, because it emphasizes people and package space as well as visibility. Longer and larger than the Sable, the Montego slots in between that popular family car and the evergreen Grand Marquis. The all-new platform comes in front- or all-wheel drive and has counterparts - specifically the Freestyle and Five Hundred - at the local Ford store. A tall car with a raised roofline, the seats in the Montego are several inches above the norm, providing an elevated and more comfortable driving position with lots of knee-to-floor room. The Montego is positioned as a premium vehicle so even the lesser of the two trim levels (Luxury and Premier) is a well-equipped automobile. The standard-equipment list includes four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, 17-inch alloy wheels, automatic on/off high-intensity-discharge headlamps, remote keyless entry, heated power mirrors, power windows and locks, dual-zone electronic climate control and six-way power driver's seat. The Montego bristles with new ideas including fast-acting LED (light-emitting diode) tail lights and a front-passenger seat that folds flat for added space, especially when used in conjunction with the splitfold rear-seat back. The engine is a 203-horsepower version of Ford's corporate 3.0-liter double-overhead-cam V6 mated to either a six-speed automatic transmission in front-drive applications or a continuously variable automatic when all-wheel drive is specified.

MINI COOPER

Believe it or not, the Mini has actually been in steady production, in roughly the same form, since 1959. However, four decades is an eternity for any automobile, and the little econo-champ was replaced for the 2002 model year with a new Mini Cooper hatchback. For 2005, two trim levels of convertible join the lineup while all models get new bumpers, headlights and taillights. Among the convertible's features is a power top that contains a built-in sunroof and a glass rear window. The business end contains a Brazilian-made 115-horsepower 1.6-liter SOHC four-cylinder. But for those thirsting for more, the 170-hp supercharged Mini Cooper S (coupe or convertible) might be more to their liking. This year, the optional dealer-installed John Cooper Works package ups the power to 210 and can be retrofitted to some earlier supercharged S models. A five-speed manual transmission is standard, while a continuously variable transmission (with a six-speed shift-for-yourself Steptronic mode) is optional. A six-speed manual is the only transmission available with the S. All models are equipped with air conditioning, CD sound system, power locks and tilt steering. The Cooper S adds a sport suspension, larger 16-inch alloy rims, sport front bucket seats and traction control.

...2005 MITSUBISHI LANCER/EVOLUTION

Mitsubishi's experience in rally racing runs deeper than any one of us realizes. In fact, the Lancer - known in this country as Mitsui's entry-level runabout - is actually known abroad as one of the fastest ways to get from point A to point C when no point B exists. Although the Lancer Sportback model has been pulled from the lineup after just one year, a new Lancer Evolution MR Edition adds a six-speed manual transmission (compared to the five-speed gearbox on the Evolution RS and Evolution VIII models) and new light-weight wheels. Other exclusive MR goodies include aluminum foot pedals, Bilstein shock absorbers and a roof spoiler. All Evolutions now have 276 horsepower driving all four wheels (up five from last year). The rest of the front-wheel-drive Lancer sedan lineup - ES, LS and OZ (as in the aftermarket wheelmaker) - stand pat with their 120-horsepower four-cylinder engines. The high-impact Rallylart model also returns with its 160-horsepower 2.4-liter four-cylinder engine.

Base price: $14,700; $30,000 (Evolution)
Type: Four-door sedan

...2005 NISSAN 350Z

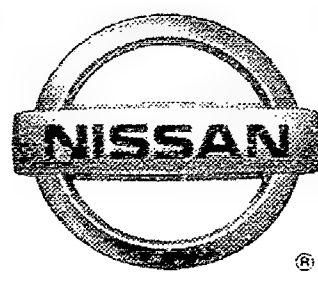

Whether you see a coupe or convertible 350Z cruising down the street, you have to be a little bit envious of the smile on the driver's face. The car is one of the best bangs-for-the-buck around, starting at just $26,500 (coupe). With 70,000 units sold so far, obviously the secret is out. There are essentially no changes to the 2005 350Z (save for a clutch that's easier to depress, standard tire-pressure monitoring and heated mirrors), but we really doubt anyone is complaining. All models arrive with a 287-horsepower 3.5-liter DOHC V6 that works through a six-speed manual transmission or optional five-speed automatic with a new rev-match downshift feature. The Roadster arrives in Enthusiast and up-level Touring trim, while the two-seat hatchback/coupe comes in base-, Enthusiast, Touring, Performance and Track. Even "base" 350Z's offer climate control, remote keyless entry, power doors/locks/mirrors, CD player, 17-inch alloy wheels and four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock. The Track model (coupe) is the most expensive, even pricier than the base Roadster, and offers equipment specifically geared to stopping and turning quicker, such as Brembo-brand brakes and 18-inch wheels. Unique Roadster gear includes a tempered-glass wind deflector and structurally reinforced chassis to keep the package tight and rattle free.

Base price: $26,500 (coupe); $34,100 (roadster)
Type: Two-door hatchback/convertible
Base engine (hp): 3.5-liter DOHC V6 (287)
Optional engine: None

...2005 NISSAN FRONTIER

Small trucks are growing up all around us. Last year, General Motors replaced its S10/Sonoma duo with the Colorado/Canyon twins. Toyota's Tacoma is growing up this year and so is Nissan's Frontier, which is based on a distilled full-size Titan chassis and available in extended King Cab and four-door Crew Cab models. Compared to the outgoing model, wheelbase has increased by 10 inches, width by 1.5 and height by three inches. Although you can still order a four-cylinder engine in base models, the big news - aside from a larger platform with a maximum towing capacity of 6,000 pounds - is a new 265-horsepower 4.0-liter V6 that replaces last year's optional 190-horsepower 3.3-liter V6. Arriving this winter, the Frontier continues to be available in rear- or four-wheel drive and two box lengths (depending on the cab chosen) an assortment of option packages to deck out your truck just the way you want it. Standard features include a six-speed manual transmission (a five-speed automatic is optional), four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock and a spray-in bedliner.

...2005 NISSAN PATHFINDER

After years maintaining the same basic low-key look, the Nissan Pathfinder gets bigger, goes quicker and looks tougher than it has in its entire 19-year life span. Formerly of unutilized construction, the third-generation model is reverting to its original truck-like heritage, featuring body-on-frame construction and an appearance that mimics the Frontier pickup which is also new. The Tennessee-built Pathfinder has also adopted many of the arid-tough exterior details that have made its beefier cousins such visual stand-outs, including bulging fender flares, distinctive grille and an upright, squared-off stance that clearly conveys a don't-mess-with-me muscular posture. Since it's bigger, there's a standard third-row seat. When not needed, either or both split-folding rear benches, as well as the passenger-side bucket, can be folded flat to accommodate lengthy/bulky cargo. A 4.0-liter version of Nissan's award-winning 3.5-liter V6 makes 265 horsepower and 284 lb.-ft. of torque, a gain of 25 horses and 19 lb.-ft. of torque. A five-speed automatic transmission replaces last year's five-speed manual and four-speed automatic. Although base models come with rear-wheel-drive only, automatic four-wheel-drive is a mere option-tick away. Other add-ons include dual-zone climate control, leather interior with heated front seats, power-adjustable foot pedals, a DVD-based navigation system with seven-inch screen, a rear-seat DVD entertainment unit, wood-trimmed interior, satellite radio and MP3-compatible Bose audio system with six-disc CD changer. Anti-lock brakes are standard while side-impact airbags and ceiling-mounted side-impact airbags are extra-cost options.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 NISSAN XTERRA

Originally introduced in 1999 as a youth-inspired - and less expensive alternative to the Pathfinder - way into the Nissan world of off-roading, the Xterra has served its purpose well. For 2005, there's an all-new model that's not only substantially larger, but more stylish and much more powerful thanks to a new standard 4.0-liter V6 rated at 250-plus horsepower. Last year's four-cylinder and 3.3-liter V6 engines are gone. The new engine (and platform), which is shared throughout Nissan's truck lineup, is coupled to a six-speed manual transmission or optional four-speed automatic. Although the Nissan Pathfinder is also based on a version of the full-size Titan pickup and shares base engines with the Xterra, the Pathfinder can seat up to seven people. The Xterra is smaller and seats five and comes in three models for 2005 - S, off-road, and SE - each available in two- or four-wheel drive. The new Xterra should be in showrooms early in calendar 2005.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 PONTIAC G6

The big news in Pontiac stores for 2005 is the arrival of replacements for the Montana minivan and the Grand Am coupe/sedan. The G6 is the name given to the Grand Am replacement as Pontiac wanted to make sure there was nothing carried over from the old model. The new car is based on the global Epsilon architecture that serves beneath a number of European General Motors products as well as the Chevrolet Malibu, Malibu Maxx wagon and Saturn Vue sport-utility vehicle on these shores. As the replacement for the aging Grand Am, the G6 is a totally modern exercise that will initially be available as a four-door sedan and then followed by coupe and convertible versions. Visually, the G6 is clearly a Pontiac, but with a decidedly more modern and crisp edge to it. The overall goal and impression is one of a more upscale vehicle with extensive attention to interior appointments, fit and finish. The G6 features a long wheelbase that allows plenty of room for seats and people between the front and rear tires. The rear coxers are wide and square, allowing the windows to be rolled all the way down (instead of part way in vehicles with smaller coxers). Pontiac claims the G6 offers more rear-seat legroom than anything in its class. Whether in base or GT format, power comes from a 200-horsepower version of GM's 3.5-liter V6 driving the front wheels through a four-speed automatic transmission. A four-cylinder as well as a 3.9-liter V6 will arrive after the initial launch this fall. The G6 marks the North American introduction of a panoramic glass sunroof with a trio of sliding panels. With an all-independent suspension and a range of 16- and 17-inch wheels and tires, the G6 continues Pontiac's Wide Track theme that began way back in 1959.

Base price: $21,800

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 PONTIAC GTO

A number of small changes greet GTO fans for 2005 along with one big one. The thunder from down under (the GTO is based on the Australian Holden Monaro) receives the new 2005 Chevrolet Corvette's base 6.0-liter V8 that pumps out 400 horsepower. That probably means there will be some sweet deals to be had on the remainder of 350-horsepower 2004 GTOs, which, up to now, have not been setting any sales records. The extra power should bring the GTO close to the five-second-flat mark in the zero-to-60-m.p.h. with acceleration department. Other additions include bigger brakes with rubber calipers (complete with GTO insignia), a pad upon which to rest your left foot, new exhaust system (and revised rear fascia to accommodate it) and an optional twin-snorkel hood. The GTO's four-wheel independent suspension continues unchanged as does its elegant, yet sporty four-place interior. Even with 400-horsepower, it's no Vette killer, but, after all, it's heavier, substantially less money and, of course, it has a back seat. The standard feature list includes front-and-rear leather bucket seats, 17-inch wheels, six-disc CD-changer with premium 10-speaker sound system, cruise control and keyless entry. Basically, the GTO is loaded.

Base price: $33,000/2004

...2005 PONTIAC MONTANA SV6

The name might be familiar, but everything between the two bumpers and four tires is anything but. Pontiac prefers not to call the 2005 Montana SV6 a minivan, instead choosing the "Sport Van" handle to describe the vehicle's sport-utility leanings. Whatever name you give it, the SV6 is a tall wagon with dual power sliding doors, three rows of seats, front or all-wheel-drive and V6 power. The all-new platform is shared by several other new GM models including the Saturn Relay, Buick Terraza and Chevy Uplander. The SV6 gets a 200-horsepower 3.5-liter V6 and a four-speed automatic transmission. Properly equipped, it can tow up to 3,500 pounds. Four wheel disc brakes with anti-lock and 17-inch wheels are standard as is a rear DVD entertainment system and a 110-volt outlet. The option list includes StabiliTrak stability control, side-impact air bags, XM satellite radio and a segment-exclusive digital audio and entertainment system powered by "PhatNoise" with a 40-gigabyte removable and downloadable hard drive. That's enough memory for 10,000 songs in MP3 format or 40 movies in MPEG format.

Base price: $28,500 (est.)
Type: Four-passenger-door minivan
Base engine (hp): 3.5-liter OHV V6 (200)
Optional engine: None
Layout: Front-engine, front/all-wheel drive

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 PORSCHE CAYENNE

What once would have been considered complete heresy -- a Porsche sport-utility vehicle -- is now the standard by which all others are judged. Long-time Porsche purists might roll their eyes and guffaw at the Cayenne, but we're not alone in thinking the company has done a great job of injecting sports-car guts and glory into a luxury off-roader. Exactly how much of each depends on your selection -- new for 2005 V6-powered base model, Cayenne S and Cayenne Turbo -- and your budget. The new base model starts at a reasonable $41,100 and comes with a 247-horsepower 3.2-liter V6 matched to a six-speed manual transmission. The package includes a long list of features such as leather seats, power latching rear tailgate, side-curtain airbags and traction and stability control. Common to both the S and the Turbo S is a 4.5-liter V8 and a six-speed automatic transmission with Tiptronic manual control. A permanent four-wheel-drive setup directs up to 100 per cent of the 340 or 450 horsepower (Cayenne Turbo) to the front or rear wheels as needed. For serious rock hopping, the Advanced Off-Road Technology Package not only features side sill protection and skid plates, but front and rear anti-roll bars that hydraulically disconnect at the touch of a switch to increase suspension travel. For the question, "what weighs 5,000-plus pounds, can ford a 22-inch deep river, tow 7,700 pounds and accelerate to 60 m.p.h. in 5.5 seconds?", Porsche has the answer: Cayenne.

Base price: $41,100 (base); $56,300 (S); $89,300 (Turbo)
Type: Four-door sport utility
Optional engine (hp): 4.5L DOHC V8 (340); 4.5L DOHC V8, twin-turbocharged (450)
Layout: Front-engine, four-wheel drive
Transmission: Six-speed Tiptronic automatic

Safety: Front, side-impact & side-curtain airbags; ABS; traction & stability control

...2005 SAAB 9-3

The handsome assortment of Saab 9-3 sedans and convertibles provide turbocharged European driving thrills to North Americans who expect something a little different from their road machines. Different, in the case of Saab, has nothing to do with any of the past styling quirkiness, but instead its reputation as a builder of safe, high-quality, low-volume and fun-to-drive specialty cars. The Linear is a base model, but that's a relative term since it includes a well-appointed interior, power windows and locks, air conditioning and a full complement of electronic aids such as stability and traction control. The Arc moves things up a notch and the top-end Aero receives a sport suspension, 17-inch wheels, leather sport seats and front and rear spoilers and a body kit. The 9-3 is driven by one of two different 2.0-liter turbocharged four-cylinder engines. (The Linear makes 175 horsepower while the Arc serves up 210.) A five-speed manual gearbox is standard and a five-speed automatic optional. The convertible comes with convenient self-latching roof that, in about 20 seconds, drops under a built-in metal cover to provide a seamless appearance whether up or down. It also offers pop-up roll bars. Other than a new base Linear convertible model and a few new colors, the 9-3 carries over for 2005.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 SATURN RELAY

Saturn moves one step closer to becoming a complete mainstream supplier of family transportation with its new 2005 Relay minivan. Actually, the Relay, as described by parent General Motors is not a minivan at all, but a "sport van." Whatever you call it and its Buick Terraza/Pontiac Montana SV6/Chevrolet Uplander siblings - the seven-passenger Relay looks and acts like a minivan with its own sport-utility-vehicle styling cues and optional all-wheel drive. The standard and only engine is GM's 200-horsepower 3.5-liter V6 coupled to a four-speed automatic transmission. Since the Relay is meant for families, there's seating for seven people across three rows (the second and third rows can be folded out of the way or removed to instead transport cargo). As well, a standard DVD-based entertainment system should keep those aft of the front row occupied. If that just doesn't do it, you can opt for a system that includes a 40-gigabyte hard drive that will store and play a mix of up to 10,000 songs or 40 movies. Standard equipment includes a CD player/MP3 player, an overhead rail system that accepts snap-in storage and accessory modules, anti-lock brakes, 17-inch steel wheels as well as air conditioning and various power accessories. Notable options include stability control (front-wheel drive only), remote start, XM satellite radio and alloy wheels.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 SAAB 9-7X

It won't arrive until the spring of 2005, but the latest and biggest Saab is certain to create a buzz. Saab dealers have been begging parent General Motors for a big sport-utility vehicle because, quite frankly, they're missing out on a lot of action. The 9-7X should not only keep the Saab faithful from defecting, but bring new out-of-brand buyers into the fold. Based on Chevy's short-wheelbase TrailBlazer, the 9-7 comes with a 275-horsepower 4.2-liter in-line six-cylinder engine or a 300-horsepower 5.3-liter V8 driving all four wheels through a four-speed automatic transmission. As befits the top model in the line, the 9-7X will come fully equipped in Linear and Arc trim levels. Standard equipment includes 18-inch alloy wheels, automatic climate control, power windows, door locks, speed control, tilt wheel, remote keyless entry and no-charge maintenance for three years or 36,000 miles. All 9-7X's get heated leather seats with power six-way adjustment and a four-way power lumbar system. In addition to the V8, the up-level Arc model gets its own wheels and integrated roof rails. Despite its GM lineage, the 9-7X definitely looks like a Saab and it should considering the effort that has gone into differentiating it from the rest of the pack. Although classified as a mid-sized sport-utility vehicle, the biggest Saab ever will tip the scales at a granite-like 4,700 pounds. Crisp styling and proven GM mechanicals should make the 9-7X a hit.

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 SCION TC

The name of the Scion game, a Toyota branding project that expands to the rest of the United States (it originated in California) this year, continues to be no-haggle value, and, for a non-negotiable price of around $16,000, the new TC coupe comes loaded with it. Key features include a 160-horsepower 2.4-liter inline four-cylinder (200 horsepower if the dealer drops in the optional Toyota Racing Development (TRD) supercharger kit), a five-speed manual transmission, air conditioning, cruise control, 17-inch alloys, anti-lock brakes, moonroof, high-output Pioneer sound system and power windows, locks and mirrors. With the rear seat (which actually reclines up to 45 degrees) and the front passenger seat folded flat, the TC can amazingly swallow objects up to eight feet in length. Actually, the TC, like the xA and xB, comes pretty much loaded up for a small sticker price since the whole idea is to bring new young customers into the Toyota fold. Scion dealers take on the responsibility of hooking up buyers with a host of accessories, whether it be a $310 auto-dimming rear-view mirror or a $995 ground-effects kit. Of the three Scion models, the TC is the most expensive (or least cheapest, depending how you look at it) although all come with plenty of standard equipment.

...2005 SUBARU LEGACY/OUTBACK

Once considered a fringe player, Subaru is hunting for mainstream buyers and it appears as though the new-for-'05 Legacy and Outback are the perfect bait. The Outback continues to be the more rugged of the two, with unique front and rear clips, added side cladding and a few inches extra ground clearance. Both lines continue to be available in sedan and wagon variants, but the sheetmetal is new and more attractive than ever. A base 168-horsepower 2.5-liter horizontally opposed four-cylinder engine provides motivation for the base Legacy 2.5i, 2.5i Limited sedan and wagon plus the Outback 2.5i and 2.5i Limited wagon. However, a turbocharged version is standard in the Legacy GT and Outback XT. Producing 250 horsepower, this powerplant promises to add considerable spring to Subaru's step. Back for another term are the six-cylinder Outbacks, designated the 3.0 R sedan, 3.0R L.L. Bean Edition wagon and 3.0R VDC Limited wagon. This time around, though, there are 250 ponies on tap, equal to the optional turbocharged four-cylinder engine's output and a 38-horsepower increase over last year's 3.0. Visually, both the Legacy and Outback turbo models are differentiated by their functioning hood scoops and 17-inch alloy wheels. Subaru reports that turbo models with the five-speed manual gearbox will crack the six-second barrier in zero-to-60-m.p.h. runs. Regardless of whether you order your Legacy or Outback plain or fancy, you'll receive a ton of standard hardware, including air conditioning, power windows, locks and doors, remote keyless entry and side-impact/side-curtain airbags.

Base price: $21,000
Type: Four-door sedan; four-door wagon

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 SUZUKI RENO

Aside from the brand-new Reno, Suzuki plans to launch five more vehicles by 2007. That's an ambitious goal but entirely doable if you consider that the Reno, Forenza and Verona have been launched within a 12-month span, and that all three are based on modified Daewoo platforms. For 2005, the new Reno answers the question of just how much four-door car you can get for a base price of about $13,000. The answer, at least as it relates to features, is a lot. Perhaps the most significant is side-impact airbags through an eight-speaker CD-equipped stereo, power windows and locks and heated outside mirrors, air conditioning and four-wheel disc brakes are also part of the package. Power comes from a 2.0-liter 126-horse four-cylinder coupled to a five-speed manual transmission or an optional four-speed automatic. Available in three trim levels, the top-of-the-line EX arrives with 15-inch alloy wheels and leather seating.

Base price: $13,500
Type: Four-door hatchback
Base engine (hp): 2.0-liter DOHC I4 (126)
Optional engine: None
Layout: Front-engine, front-wheel drive
Transmissions: Five-speed manual; four-speed automatic (opt.)
Mileage (city/hwy): 22/30 (MT)
Safety: Front airbags; side-impact airbags; ABS (opt.)

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 TOYOTA TACOMA

Now sharing a much larger platform with the 4Runner, the Tacoma has been redesigned with more room and power in mind and a whole lot more style. To move around the extra bulk (and heft), a 164-horsepower 2.7-liter four-cylinder engine (backed by a five-speed manual transmission or four-speed automatic) becomes the new base powerplant, while a 245-horsepower 4.0-liter V6 (coupled to a six-speed manual or optional five-speed automatic) becomes the new optional engine. That's a boost of 50 compared to last year's optional 3.4-liter unit. The Tacoma comes in the usual regular, extended Access-Cab and four-door Double-Cab models and your choice of rear- or four-wheel drive for all. A new feature for 2005 is a box floor and walls (available in two lengths) that's made of composite plastic. It won't rust and there's no urgent need for a bedliner. Of the more interesting models is the Toyota Racing Development (TRD) off-road package and the contrasting down-in-the-weeds X-Runner so named for its body-stiffening X-braces. Where the TRD stakes its claim with electronic locking differential, skid plates to protect the underbelly, thinner front anti-roll bar for more suspension travel and sport seats, the X-Runner is busy picking off sports cars at the local mall parking lot autocross event. Packing a six-speed manual transmission, tasty ground effects and tune-like lowered stance, the goal with the rear-drive X-Runner was to be able to keep pace with a Nissan 350Z. With close to 1.0 G of lateral acceleration, but 40 less horsepower than Nissan's star, we'll leave that up to you to decide, but don't take it for granted if you see the X-Runner's jewel headlamps in your rear-view mirror.

Base price: $14,000 (est.)
Type: Two-door mid-sized pickup
Base engine (hp): 2.7-liter DOHC I4 (154)
Optional engine (hp): 4.0-liter DOHC V6 (245)

Safety: Front, side-impact & side-curtain airbags (opt.); ABS; traction control & stability control (opt.)

NEW FOR 2005!

...2005 VOLKSWAGEN PHAETON

The big deal - and we mean really big - over at your VW dealership is the Phaeton, which is intended to provide luxury - real luxury, that is - for less. Less than what, exactly, you ask? Presumably a lot less loot than the Bentley Continental GT (a car that shares the Phaeton's platform) will fetch. With a wheelbase that's six-inches longer than that of a Pontiac Bonneville, you can see where Volks is heading . . . up town. Base power comes from a 330-horsepower 4.2-liter V8. Or, if you can imagine two V6 engines strapped together with a common crankshaft, 414 horsepower from the optional 6.0-liter W12 engine that belts out 550 lb.-ft. of torque. (Just for kicks, the Bentley adds two turbochargers for a whopping 540 horsepower.) For around $67,000, Phaeton buyers will want for nothing as all-wheel drive is standard along with four-zone climate control, electronically controlled air suspension, 10-speaker sound system, navigation system, rear power sunshade, eight airbags, xenon headlights and a sunroof. The W12 model costs about $29,000 more, but when you compare the Phaeton to other premium luxury brands out there, it should prove attractive, and not just on price point. For 2005, Phaeton receives a new grille, new standard 18-inch wheels and upgraded wood trim on the inside.

Base price: $67,000
Type: Four-door sedan
Base engine (hp): 4.2-liter DOHC V8 (330)
Optional engine (hp): 6.0L DOHC W12 (414)

TOYOTA 2005 CAMRY

Life doesn't stand still. One minute you're off to work, the next you're on your way to play. So you need a car that can take you wherever life goes. The 2005 Camry is that car. It's sophisticated, but not stuffy. It's also comfortable and safe, and goes like a double espresso. The Camry is the right way to get where you're going.

2005 TUNDRA

We call the Tundra life-sized. It's got a big interior—ample leg, shoulder and headroom—plenty of space for your gear crew. It even seats six with the center seat available in Access and Double Cab models. And this year it's got an even bigger engine and a 252-hp 4.7-liter FORCE V8 with VVT.

...2005 VOLVO S40/V50

In one fell swoop, Volvo's entry-luxury cars have gone from "ho-hum" to "wow!" The S40 sedan and companion V50 wagon (assembled in Belgium), are clean-sheet designs that feature their larger sibling's unmistakable protruding snouts and, with neatly creased lines and flab-absent sheetmetal, easily match their German and Japanese competitors in the appearance department. Employing a global platform shared by the Ford Focus as well as the new-for-'04 Mazda3 (Ford owns a chunk of Mazda), the S40/V50 have been made considerably stiffer than their predecessors, which, according to Volvo, improves handling and ride comfort. On the inside, the S40/V50's creators employed some silver bits and completely avoided using wood inserts, faux or otherwise. On base 2.4i models, a 168-horsepower 2.4-liter five-cylinder gets the job done, while a sportier 218-horse 2.5-liter turbocharged five-cylinder powers the T5. Ordering the 2.4 gives you a choice of a five-speed manual transmission, or optional five-speed automatic. T5 buyers get a six-speed manual, with a five-speed automatic available for substitution. Making all-wheel-drive available on these cars for the first time not only improves their all-weather versatility, but puts them in a competitive league with most entry-luxury imports. Along with an impressive list of standard comfort and safety features, the S40 and V50 are available with a keyless locking system that can be programmed to open specific doors on command as well as turn on the engine from a distance or from inside without using the key.
